Description:

Incredible footage of a translucent type entity caught briefly on NASA's live stream of the International Space Station. The footage cuts off due to NASA pulling the plug on the transmission and replacing it with the infamous static bar screen. If this is genuine footage then it proves yet again that NASA have failed to inform the people of the world that life exists outside planet Earth, albeit in this case, a possible proteus life form or invertebrate. Footage submitted via my website by Henry Grantham. ADG Facebook: <http://www.facebook.com/pages/Alien-Disclosure-Group/189249627773146> Follow ADG on Twitter: http://twitter.com/ADG_UK

Spikey

'Swimming through space' is a euphemism people, descriptive of it's apparent movement, not meant to be actually 'swimming'....you knew that...right?

As for the thing itself 'moving as though it is swimming through space'..no idea.

Thought it might be a tiny insect accidentally brought up and let loose in the ISS, but it looks like it moves behind that golden coloured fitting, meaning it looks like it's outside, so not an Earth bug obviously.

There are other life forms out there IMO, but as to whether this is one species of a simple space 'critter'..i've no idea.

Thanks for the upload anyway OP.

If this is real. It's a great find. It really does look like a something is swimming past. The only problem is there is water, air, or any other medium for it to swim in??? So that draws it into question. Could be just a clever fake. No links to follow and check out. But in it's favour they pull the plug on the live transmission. Which is my experience when ever something of interest comes into view.
