

Cattle Mutilations On The Rise

Hi Steph,

This may have been mentioned already if it has I apologise.

The main theory of the APFU is that the mutilations are checking for chemicals we are putting into our food chain. Certain parts of the anatomy hold tell tale signs of these chemicals. The thing is that mutilations are not only performed on live stock. In the UK Badgers, Cats, Foxes even field mice have been found with mutilation signatures. Rectal bore is consistant with each type of animal, eg all sheep have one size bore, all badgers have another size etc. Close to a nuclear power station one farmer had nearly all of his flock of sheep mutilated on one rainy evening, no foot prints were found in the saturated mud of the field only approx 20 carcasses with mutilation signatures. Some of the flock had heads removed, many of them had a tiny hole that went through behind the ear of the sheep and exited the other side.

There seems to be some connection with balls of light in this subject as well. Many farmers experience seeing balls of light before a mutilated carcass is found. Phil Hoyle has investigated many cases and told me that he has seen elliptical marks as though a sphere has touched the ground on a hilly field where some of these animals are found. Strange stuff!
