Aziz

Aziz (Arabic: عزيز, ʿazīz, [ʕaziːz]) was originally a Northwest Semitic Syriac/Hebrew/Assyrian Neo-Aramaic word, but is now much more commonly (but not exclusively) known as a Central Semitic Arabic male name. Aziz in Arabic is derived from the root ʕ-z-z with a meaning of “strong, powerful”. It is a cognate of Hebrew oz meaning “might, strength, power”. The Semitic word refers to the “power and glory” of deities and kings. Al-Aziz is one of the names of God in Islam, and the word is also used in reference to the “king of Egypt” (pharaoh) in the quranic Surah-e-Yusuf.

But the adjective has acquired a more generic meaning of “dear, darling, precious” in existing Semitic Languages such as Arabic, Assyrian Neo Aramaic, Mandic and Hebrew. Aziz is a common masculine given name, especially in the Muslim world but it has also continued to be used since Pre Islamic and Pre-Arab times by indigenous non-Muslim peoples in the Middle East, e.g. Assyrians, Jews/Israelites the Maronites, and Mandeans. The feminine form of both the adjective and the given name is Aziza.
