What do confounding and scattering have to do with the place and tower being named "Babel"?

The Hebrew original does make some sense: The root of the verb "to confound" is composed of three letters: bet, lamed, lamed (in modern Hebrew, the verb is "balbel," but its ancient version is "balel" ). The Greek translators of the Bible were aware that they would be losing this play on words, and in the Septuagint, the tower is called "Sughysis," which is derived from the Greek verb for "to confound."
