1. Question

I was wondering why Jesse Ventura and the government believe something bad will happen to us on December 21, 2012, they have supposedly already built bunkers underground so they can leave us to suffer. I don't understand it. It scares me to death and I am hoping it is proven wrong.

Nothing will happen on December 21, 2012 — and the government knows this. "Underground bunkers" is one part of the big 2012 hoax. I expect that Jesse Ventura knows this too, but he is in show-business. His show “Conspiracy Theory” is entertainment, not journalism. Watch his episode on 2012 carefully and you will see he shows no government bunkers and interviews no one who claims to have seen them. It is all innuendo and speculation, plus one case where private developers are constructing homes inside an abandoned missile silo (and he made no attempt to find out why). There are bomb-proof civil defense bunkers all around the U.S. that were built during the cold war, especially during the Eisenhower administration. These include the famous Cheyenne Mountain operations center of the Strategic Air Command [http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cheyenne Mountain] and the large complex at Greenbrier, West Virginia, which was once the designated site for senior government officials in case of atomic attack on Washington [http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/The Greenbrier]. Civil defense shelters are an old story, and they have nothing to do with 2012. (Many readers will wonder why I continue to answer questions about 2012, but I still receive about 25 per week, many from people who are genuinely frightened of the end of the world.)
