

From Ken Carey's The Starseed Transmissions

I hope the significance of this material is not lost to certain readers because of a reluctance to accept its purported origin. Regardless of one's opinion on the plausibility of extraterrestrial or angelic communion, it might be pointed out that the simple act of structuring information in this manner opens up communicative possibilities that are virtually non-existent in a conventional mode....

In the course of my work with these creatures, I understood them to be focalizations of various essential perspectives. At times I considered these extraterrestrial, at other times, angelic. Occasionally, I thought of the entities as informational cells within a Galactic organism of some sort. Toward the end of the transmissions, other, more mythical perspectives emerge, about which I will make no comment here. But by whatever term we choose to understand these entities their purpose in sending these messages has not been to teach us of themselves, but to teach us of our own nature and purpose upon this third planet from the star we call Sun.
