Making Scented Incense (Strong)

3 tablespoons of powdered frankincense
2 tablespoons of powdered orris
1 tablespoon each of powdered cloves and raspings of sandalwood and mix well.

Add a few drops of bergamot oil mixing into the dry mixture thoroughly. Store mixture in a cool, dark cupboard for at least 2 months to allow it to mature. When ready all you need do is sprinkle a teaspoonful over some smouldering coal or charcoal. If you make plenty of this in advance it makes for a great present.

SUMMER SOLSTICE RITUAL POTPOURRI

--25 drops lemon 25 drops lavender oil 1 cup oak moss

--2 cups dried lavender 2 cups dried wisteria 2 cups dried verbena

Mix the lemon or lavender oil with the oak moss, and then add the remaining ingredients.

Stir the potpourri well and store in a tightly covered ceramic or glass container.

INCENSE RECIPIES

Be sure all herbs, spices, peels, and flowers are completely dry.

All dry ingredients must be ground into a fine powder.

Mix all ingredients in a small glass container with a clean stick or your fingers.
Let the incense stand over night to dry.
Store any unused incense in a tightly capped glass jar, away from light. These incenses need self-igniting charcoal. Check the classified ads. Or, in a pinch, you might try to smolder some in a small, heavy pan on top of your stove.
Most important, for best results, try to blend your energies with the incense as you prepare and use it.

Soak about 1/2 handful raisins in white wine for 5 days. Take equal parts of:

juniper acacia sweet sedge root henna

Macerate all in white wine for 24 hours. Take equal parts of:

calamus gum mastic peppermint bay laurel cinnamon Galangal orris

Grind these to a powder, mix well and set aside.

Drain the raisins, mix with 1 TB. myrrh and 1 TB. honey.

Add the drained herbs, and finally work in the powdered herbs.

If the mixture is too dry, add a little of the white wine.

Spread out on a board to dry, powder and use on charcoal discs.

10 ml gardenia oil per 8 oz. dry herb 10 ml magnolia oil per 8 oz. dry herb

KYPHI INCENSE

This recipe was reconstructed from ancient Egyptian papyri.

Although an ingredient or two may not have translated correctly, this should be pretty close to the actual incense used in Egyptian temples.

Ingredients:

3/4 part Honey 3 part Raisins 1/4 part Copal 1/4 part Myrrh 1/4 part Orris

1 part Sandalwood 1/4 part Storax 1/2 part Frankincense

1/2 part Cinnamon (REAL stuff only, and grind it forever)

Red Wine (enough to moisten mixture) Benzoin (enough to roll balls in)

Thoroughly grind all ingredients separately, then mix together groups of ingredients by nature:

resinous together, powdery together, etc. Finally, mix all batches together, add red wine to moisten, then roll into 5/8" balls and roll balls in benison. Lay out on waxed paper for a week or so, until firm.

The balls can be used when firm, but for best results, they should be allowed to cure a few weeks.

EARTH INCENSE

Earth is usually associated with the direction of north. This element is feminine in nature, and its attributes include stability, fertility, prosperity, grounding, money, planting, home life, the Mother Earth herself, and many types of healing. For the basic earth incense combine the following:

3 parts patchouli 2 parts pine 1 part bistort 1 part Vervain

Other earth-related herbs and plants include barley, cedar, corn silk, juniper, magnolia, oak bark, soybeans and wheat.

WATER INCENSE

Water is usually assigned to the direction of west. This is the element of the natural psychic, one related to pregnancy, birth, rebirth, death, regeneration, divination, purification, psychic endeavors, spirit contact, and past life exploration. Water is the other feminine element.

To make the basic water incense try using the following:

3 parts lavender 1 part willow bark 1 part catnip 1/4 part valerian

Other water-related herbs and plants include cypress bark, jasmine, kelp, lotus, moss, mrytle, myrrh, rue, sandalwood chips, seaweed, and vanilla.

FIRE INCENSE

Fire is a masculine element, one usually associated with the south in the Northern Hemisphere.

Its energies govern the areas of protection, employment, sex magic, the law, exorcism, strength and courage, and profound transformations or change. A basic fire incense recipe contains:

4 parts frankincense 3 parts cinnamon 1 part dried orange peels 1/4 part thyme

Other fire-related herbs and plants include allspice, basil, bay, black pepper, clove, cumin, dill, garlic, ginger, nutmeg, onions, and thistle.

AIR INCENSE

Air is the other masculine element and it is usually associated with east.

Areas governed by this element are education, communication, weather magic, general power raising, and music magic. The following combination makes a basic air incense:

4 parts rosemary 2 parts mugwort 1 part chicory 1/2 part coffee beans

Other air-related herbs and plants include benzoin, elm bark, lavender, parsley, sage, spearmint

INCENSE

There are basically two forms of incense: combustible and noncombustible.

We'll tackle the latter first, since it's by far the easiest method and requires little explanation.

Noncombustible incense is achieved by simply sprinkling a few pinches of dried plant material, or a blend of materials, on a smoldering charcoal block. That's a charcoal block, not a charcoal briquette used for the barbecue! Briquettes are of different composition, and give off toxic amounts of carbon monoxide. Don't use them to burn incense! Instead, occult supply stores, and many novelty shops carry a supply of raw charcoal blocks for this purpose. While we're in a cautious mode, let it be said that you should always burn incense in some type of censor. It could be a censor purchased just for this purpose, or a ceramic dish laid with a few inches of sand or salt. Sometimes the sweet aroma of dried plant material can change dramatically when burned! You'll need to experiment with blends you may already have in mind, or to discover new ones. And, by using the noncombustible method, your mistakes, if any, will be short lived. I would also advise that you sample mixtures on smoldering charcoal before proceeding to making them into combustible incense. The plant material to be used should be finely ground in a food processor, blender, hand held coffee grinder, or an old fashioned mortar and pestle. Combustible incense is made in the form of sticks (sometimes called joss-sticks), bricks, or cones. Whatever the volume and shape, combustible incense is always made with potassium nitrate, better known as salt peter. This helps the incense to burn well, and evenly. You can find potassium nitrate in nearly any drug store, although you may have to ask the pharmacist for it. You will need thin wooden splints or skewers, such as thin, straight twigs, or cocktail skewers. Each stick is dipped into the incense base until covered. They are then allowed to dry standing on end, perhaps by poking them into a slab of clay, or a pot of dirt or sand. This process is repeated until a satisfactory amount of layers have built up on each stick. Block incense is made by rolling out the final mixture on wax paper to a 1/4 inch thickness - much like cookie dough. Then cut into 1 inch squares and allow to dry thoroughly. And there you have it! Not so tough, although you will get good use from a kitchen apron while working the mixtures together! Now, on to some recommended blends, the first of which is an ancient blend indeed.

KYPHI INCENSE

Kyphi is an ancient Egyptian formula of which the Greek Essayist, Plutarch (46-120 AD) said:

"its aromatic substances lull to sleep, allay anxieties, and brighten the dreams. It is made of things that delight most in the night and exhibits its virtues by night."

The following is a traditional recipe for making Kyphi. If you want to stick to it fine, but you may also omit or substitute certain herbs if some of the ingredients are difficult to obtain.

Place 1/4 cup raisins in a bowl. Add just enough white wine to cover the raisins, cover loosely with a tea towel or cheesecloth, and allow to steep for seven days.

On the third day, blend equal parts of the following powdered herbs in a bit of white wine: Juniper, Acacia, Henna, Sweet Sedge Root. After two days drain and reserve any liquid.

On the last day, drain the raisin mixture, reserving the liquid. In a small bowl mix together equal parts of the following ground herbs: Calamus, Gum Mastic, Peppermint, Bay Laurel, Orris, Cinnamon, and Galangal. Set aside. In another small bowl blend together 1 tbs. powdered myrrh, and 1 tbs. clove honey. To this mixture add the ground herbs, and the raisins and herbs steeped in wine. Blend well. Add a little of the reserved wine if the mixture becomes too dry. Follow the directions for making cone or block incense.

FULL MOON INCENSE

This incense is used in many rituals and is a common spell component. It is an incense of increase that is deceptively easy to make. Use all of your focus and energy, your will and intention, while making this scent.

It is used over charcoals (the one's specifically made for incense) or over a ritual fire.

CAUTION! Warning and Yikes! If used over a ritual fire, flames will leap up along the dust trail of this incense powder! There will be sparkling (sparks) of incense outside of this trail of flames as well! This is an impressive effect, but dangerous if you are not practiced at it! Start out small and toss about 1 teaspoon of it over the glowing coals or flames, all at once, don't trail the dust or sprinkle it. Stand away from the fire, and upwind. Use in areas that do not require burn permits, and have something to douse the fire nearby. Do not use if you are wearing gauzy or loose ritual robes and costumes.

FULL MOON INCENSE

Within the three days prior to the actual full moon, but not after!

Gather the ingredients required, along with a pestle and mortar to blend them in. If desired, you can use your cauldron, and some sort of crushing or mixing tool.

1 ounce (about 30 grams) of the finest sandalwood powder you can find (santalum album)

5 grams (a marble sized nugget) of amber resin, NOT the stone! The soft, sweet smelling resin that is often imported from India, available at health food stores, and of course herb and Witch shops.

3 drops of vanilla essential oil. NOT the perfume or fragrance oil, only true vanilla from the orchid (Vanilla planifolia or Vanilla aromatica)
If this is cost prohibitive or unavailable, use real vanilla extract available at most any grocery store. Preferably outside, under the actual full moon, or indoors near a window where the moon is visible:
Fill the mortar or cauldron with the sandalwood powder, and crush the amber into it with the pestle or tool of your choice. Use clockwise or deosil blending motions.
Focus on the energy of the full moon, or if you are making the incense for a specific spell, focus on the goal of that spell alone. You can incorporate your favorite words of power or chant while doing this. When the powder is smooth and consistent, add the vanilla, one drop at a time while saying your chosen words of power, (which is best) or the following (which will suffice in most cases): Drop of moon, grant my boon.
Blend in the drops in the same way you blended in the amber resin. Place the mixture in a clear glass jar with an airtight lid. Keep it away from heat, sunlight, and moisture.
Charge it under the light of the full moon on the three days prior to it becoming actually full.
The full moon light penetration is the reason for not storing this in an opaque jar.
It is ready for use immediately, but can be charged more if desired.

INCENSE

Gum tragacanth (or use gum Arabic as a substitute) is made into a glue, and acts as a binding agent.
It is the key ingredient in all molded incense. To make the glue, place a teaspoon of the ground gum in a glass of warm water and mix completely until dispersed. A foam may rise, but it can be easily redistributed, or skimmed off if it gets in your way. (The gum is unbelievably absorbent! A mere ounce will absorb up to one full gallon of water in a single week!)
Allow your gum mixture to absorb the glass of water until it thickens to a paste.
Now you will need to create your incense base. An incense base is made up of talcum powder, sawdust, ground spice, dried herbs and flowers, or any combination thereof. Once you have defined your base, an essential oil may be added for additional scent, the potassium nitrate is blended in, and finally, the gum-glue.
Here's a sample mixture for cone incense:
--6 parts powdered sandalwood or cedar 2 parts benzoin 1 part orris root
--3-5 parts ground herb mixture of choice 6 drops essential herbal oil of choice Mix the first four ingredients until well blended. Add the essential oil (or combination of oils) and mix with your hands until you have a fine, crumbly mixture. Add the dried herb mixture and mix again. Now add 10% potassium nitrate (KNO3). In other words, use a ratio of 10:1.

If you've made 10 oz. of incense base, then add 1 oz. of KNO3.

Next comes the addition of the glue mixture. Add one teaspoon at a time, mixing with your hands as you go. Add only enough of the glue to achieve the consistency of model clay or play dough from the entire mixture.

On a piece of waxed paper, shape the mixture into small cone shapes (just like the store bought ones you're already familiar with) and allow them to dry for a week in a cool, dry place. The area you choose to dry the incense cones in must be free of moisture in order to dry thoroughly.

By following the sample recipe given, you can also make stick incense.

Although, this requires much more patience and tenacity than making any other form.

Plan to spend the better part of a day in making these.

LAVENDER SUMMER POTPOURRI

(all ingredients are dried):

4 cups lavender flowers 1 cup mixed culinary herbs, such as oregano, basil, thyme and rosemary ½ cup southernwood
2 cups pink rosebuds and petals 1 cup spearmint
¼ cup chopped orris root or other fixative mixed with 1 tsp. essential lavender oil.

Combine all ingredients and store in a glass jar or zip lock bags for 2 - 4 weeks to allow it to blend. Display in pretty glass or ceramic bowls, or put into sachets or sacks.

HAPPINESS SIMMERING POTPOURRI

This just does something to people and I can't figure out what it is. They totally love the scent and go absolutely wild over it.

I've used the recipe in simmering potpourri, soap and other things. It works in almost anything and is simple to make.

--1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract 1 teaspoon and a half of rose oil
--1 teaspoon and a half of lavender oil

--One chamomile tea bag (empty the bag into your bowl)

--4 good shakes of cinnamon 1 teaspoon of coriander 1 bowl 1 spoon

Measure out all the dry ingredients into your bowl.

Add your energy into them by mixing the ingredients with your fingertips.

When you feel they are well mixed and you are content, add the oils and other liquid ingredients and mix with a spoon until all dry ingredients are damp.

Use as needed...simmer with water as potpourri or..use it however you wish.

When I made this I simply couldn't get the smell off my hands. Not for days.

No matter how many times I washed. But when I made it into bath salts and soap the smell hardly showed up at all. It only seems to show up when you seem to need it and then a person can't get enough of it and they smell it and smell it until it's ALL they smell.
