

חַוֵּר

pale ; weak, unimpressive חוּר

<http://www.morfix.co.il/en/%D7%97%D6%B4%D7%95%D6%B5%D7%A8>

شَاحِب

شَاحِب pale;emaciated

<http://arertools.com/>

پژمرده

پژمرده faded, withered, withering, droopy, pale, languorous

<https://translate.google.com/#auto/fa/pale>

Prior to the 1800's, about 2000 years before, there came to the Smokey Mountains a teacher revered among the Tsalagi as the Pale One. The Pale One rekindled the sacred fires and reaffirmed to the people the basic principles of creation.

<http://www.sunray.org/dotnetnuke/Peacekeeper/OurPractice/TeachingsofthePaleOne/tabid/68/Default.aspx>

In 1969 the elders of Dhyani Ywahoo's Tsalagi/Cherokee group decided to release teachings that have been kept in secret since the conquest. Through books, lectures and workshops, Dhyani Ywahoo is disseminating that knowledge. She claims that her own Ywahoo lineage was founded by a legendary prophet called the Pale One who rekindled the sacred fires throughout the Americas. She says: "The Pale One is a cyclically incarnating being. He comes when the people have forgotten their sacred ways, bringing reminders of the Law, recalling all to right relationship. He is expected soon again, and he may be alive even now. It is good.”

http://www.earthalive.com/Ancient\_Prophecies.html

In Native American history, there have been frequent visitings of divine emissaries, like Wovoka who came for the nations of the western plains, the Pale One for the Cherokee, Deganawida for the Iroquoian people, Quetzalcoatl for the Mayan people, White Buffalo Calf Woman to the Lakota and many more. These sacred beings came to restore the pristine original instructions that were forgotten or ignored by the people, causing strife, war, hardship, misery, famine and other unnatural circumstances.

<http://www.blueeagle1.net/article-31120490.html>