Interview with Karla Turner, Ph.D.

From Contact Forum, May/June 1995

(Note: Karla Turner was a dedicated and compassionate woman who helped many abductees come to terms with their abusive alien experiences, and was not afraid to tell the truth, no matter how bizarre it might have sounded. Karla has appeared on the Montel Williams show and other programs to discuss her research. She passed away as a result of a particularly deadly form of terminal cancer. She will be missed. Some suspect that the cancer was induced via radiation received from earlier abductions, but this cannot be confirmed. This is a rather extensive interview, so we will deal with only some of the highlights. Once you have finished reading the following you, like myself, may also become a firm advocate of "draconicide"! - Branton):

INTRODUCTION:

CF: You are widely regarded as one of the leading experts in the field of UFO and "alien-abduction" research. How did you get started in your study of these things?

KT: Our family knew nothing about the phenomenon when we started having UFO sightings and abduction encounters. Being a researcher, I turned to the UFO literature for an explanation. When I absorbed what was available, I found no answers that I felt were trustworthy. I decided that this was a crucial situation for my family (if not globally), and the only way I could get answers was to do the research myself. The only way to do the research, in this case, was to go out into the field and deal with abduction cases.

PERSONAL HISTORY -- "INTO THE FRINGE":

CF: Was "Into the Fringe" the first result of that? [Karla's first book]

KT: Actually, "Into the Fringe" was not a result of research to gain answers. It is more of an account of my family's awakening to, and coping with, these experiences during the first year and a half, when they were very intense. It was not until after that that I started to branch out and work with other people. I worked with Barbara Bartholic on our case, and began working with her on other cases. Many times she would come to Texas (where I lived) and we would set up a four-or-five-day work session, during which people in that area who wanted to work with her would come to my home. She would interview them and place them under regressive hypnosis there. I began to learn by acting as her assistant. (If Ph.D.'s were available in this field, Barbara should certainly have one. Working with her proved to be much more educational than my academic career.) Then Barbara's caseload got so heavy that she was no longer able to handle it. It was no longer enough for me to assist, and I had to be doing preliminary investigative work myself. And that was how my involvement developed.

GENERATIONAL ABDUCTIONS:

CF: We have been finding, in a lot of cases, that experiencers' parents, sometimes their great-grandparents have had the same types of encounters that they have. Is that what you found in your family?

KT: Yes, it is definitely "transgenerational" in Elton's family. [Elton, Dr. Turner's husband, was given the pseudonym "Casey" in the books 'Into the Fringe' and 'Taken'. They no longer feel it is necessary to protect his identity.] Before Elton's grandmother died, in 1990 or 1991, the family knew she was near the end of her time here, so they asked her to tell some of the old stories, and videotaped her response for posterity... My mother refuses to say anything, because it is just too frightening to her. She has not yet even finished reading "Into the Fringe". Each time she reads a page or two, she becomes so upset that she can't go any further -- which tells me that there is probably a reason for her feelings. I remember that, in 1965, when I was a senior in high school, a big flap was making national news. It was one of the few times that I had ever paid attention to the UFO thing. One day, Mother and I were listening to the TV while doing something in the kitchen. Walter Cronkite was talking about the UFO flap, and I told Mother that if a UFO landed in the backyard, I probably would go get on it. My mother, who is extremely gentle, and who never raised her voice or hit me, stopped what she was doing, grabbed me by both shoulders and shook me until I felt as if my teeth would fall out. All the while, she was saying, forcefully, "You swear to me, you will not ever, ever, ever get near one! Don't you dare even say that!" It was the only outburst I have ever known my mother to have in my entire life. I now know -- from research -- that extreme responses like that to this phenomenon are often indicators that a person has had experiences.

HYPNOTIC REGRESSION:

CF: You mentioned the use of hypnosis, which has been the subject of a lot of controversy. Some of the other researchers have said that people under hypnosis can come up with scenarios that did not happen, in order to please the hypnotist. Some have said that the multiple levels of experience -- where one can break through screen memories and ferret out buried memories that are different -- are artifacts of the process of hypnosis. What are your opinions about these issues?

KT: I think those positions are completely untenable, they grow out of what I call armchair research. I don't conceive you will find them being espoused by anyone who has actually had the experiences. If they have been through them and want to come back and talk about what happens when they undergo hypnosis, to look at what they consciously remember, then we can have a dialogue. Right now, they are speaking without knowledge. They are speaking hypothetically, and their opinions are based on erroneous understandings of the phenomenon, of the experiences, and of the control exerted upon abductees during these experiences. It is easy to philosophize any number of explanations, but that does not mean that those explanations have any relationship to what is really going on. Also, there are bad hypnotists and good hypnotists. (Note: A bad hypnosis is one who in essence takes advantage of the individuals psychological vulnerability by engaging in what amounts to 'psychological rape'. A good hypnotist will NOT violate a persons' will, or try to alter their perception of reality, or inject unsolicited post-hypnotic suggestions in the individuals mind, or attempt to make them do or believe things that they would NOT consciously accept while in a waking state. THIS is the danger of hypnosis. While in this state, a hypnotic subject is completely at the mercy of the hypnotist. This is why a hypnotist dealing with suppressed memories must be someone WHO CAN BE ABSOLUTELY TRUSTED, and one should NEVER be "put under" unless there is at least one other trustworthy individual in the room monitoring. Go to top t. Hypnotism is serious business and should NOT be attempted by anyone who is not qualified. - Branton). A bad hypnotist probably can foul up a number of things. I know that people who have gone to hypnotists for smoking or dietary problems have sometimes suffered more after hypnosis. Obviously, some things can be mishandled. But my experience with hypnosis and the veracity of what is recalled has, in several cases, been proven to me to be accurate. I have been able to investigate these cases. At times erroneous material does surface, or is created because of the situation, but that is not typical. I conclude that hypnosis is, by and large, one of the most excellent tools we have. Used properly, it may be the only tool we have to get certain pieces of information (or levels of information) back up to the conscious state. I have been able to test a number of hypnotically recalled memories against externally verifiable evidence, and they have proven to be correct.

SCREEN 'MEMORIES', CHAMELEONS AND 'NAZIS':

CF: You have found, have you not, that sometimes there are multiple levels, like the layers of an onion? An experiencer undergoes hypnosis and comes up with a scenario, then, when he is regressed to a deeper level, he breaks through the first level (you find out that it was a screen memory), and a different scenario emerges.

KT: Yes, and it seems to me that, in some cases, a bottom level can be reached.

CF: How many layers are there; how deep can you go; and what's at the bottom?

KT: We have not done enough research to answer any of those questions without being an armchair philosopher. Typically (not always) the first recall deals mostly with conscious information. When the subject is taken to the next deeper level of the trance state and asked to focus, often what will be reported is that what was seen was not the same as the conscious recall. Then a groping process begins. The subject thinks, "This was inaccurate; I feel that something was wrong; and when I focus, I see that it was not what I thought it was." That is a transitional level. There may be only a couple of levels -- as opposed to, say twenty levels -- but there certainly is a cover level, underlain by a more solid foundation. If the subjects are helped to program their mental computers to penetrate illusion and to speak only truthful, accurate statements, to, as Barbara has often said, "clarify vision," then they will recall radically different scenarios -- not expanded versions of the firsts scenarios, but something quite different from what their conscious memories had left them with. There are at least two levels, and possibly three.

CF: People have told us that they can break through screen memory after screen memory until they get to a scenario involving reptilians, and that is as far as they can go. Have you found that to be the case?

KT: In the few cases that I am very familiar with, when the "base line" was reached, reptilians were involved.

CF: Are the greys always involved in the top level?

KT: Sometimes the first level involves greys, sometimes humans, sometimes Pleiadians, sometimes strange animals.

CF: Abductees tell stories of seeing beings -- angelic Nordics, for example -- and then, when they concentrate and try to focus on their memories of those beings, they disappear, and behind them are these "lizard people."

KT: I am not familiar with a number of cases. Go to top and other researchers talk about the same thing. In one case that I recount in "Into the Fringe," James had mostly conscious recollections and almost no hypnosis. He remembered being drawn into the proximity of a beautiful "Pleiadian" woman, who was very alluring and tender, and almost seductive. She wanted him to come into her embrace. When he got into the embrace, and thought she was going to kiss him, she disappeared entirely, and what was left in her place was a purplish-black, bumpy, almost slimy-looking character with fairly asymmetrical features. I have encountered this same type of creature in a couple of other cases. The entity was very strong. Instead of embracing James, the creature threw him down on the ground and shoved a two-foot-long tube down his throat, into his stomach, and pulled up stomach juices. The next day, he still had some of the bile taste, the interior of his throat was sore, and he discovered claw marks around both sides of his neck, where he had been held down. Whatever the entity was, there was something claw-like about it (which, of course, matches reptilians). Maybe, as close as he was to it, he could not perceive the whole figure. But he could see a bumpy covering, which could equate to the rough, scaly exterior sometimes reported to be reptilian. It is described as bumpy, ridged, bony, strong, clawed.

CF: Apparently these beings have the ability to project different images.

KT: Some people say that they transform -- that they mutate or change their own real forms. I don't accept that as accurate. I don't believe they really look like a blond, and they do something to trick you and then they suddenly look like a reptilian. I think that what they alter is human perception. They certainly can project false images -- just as Ted's [Ted Rice's] grandmother was shown her dead husband, so that she would consent to have a sexual encounter. Ted's grandfather had been dead for six years. And in the middle of having the encounter with what she thought was her restored husband, the image disappeared -- I suppose because the aliens wanted to get the "emotional juice" from her -- and she saw a 'reptoid' on top of her. We also have heard stories about military people being present during abduction, and when people focus on them, they change. Budd Hopkins tells a story about a person who saw a military policeman. He wondered why on Earth the MP was there, and tried to focus very carefully on him. When he did so, the MP changed, before his eyes, into an officer of high rank, and then into a NAZI officer. (Note: Under regressive hypnosis Barney Hill -- who along with his wife Betty claimed to have been abducted by reptilian 'grays' from Zeta Reticuli -- also reported seeing a "German Nazi" military officer on the craft, working with the aliens. This is suggestive that the CIA more-or-less inherited the alien collaboration agenda that was initiated by the 'Baverians' in or around 1933. - Branton) The aliens cannot allow us to be involved with them in our normal state of mind because we would be under our own control, and that is not what they desire."

[Further statements from Karla Turner by subject]:

THREATS THROUGH THE USE OF CLONES:

"...She was told, 'If you don't cooperate, we'll replace you with this and nobody will know the difference.' When Ted was a teenage, he and a number of other teenagers were abducted together and shown copies of their bodies. In this instance, too, the clones were used as threats."

ALIEN USE OF CLONES:

(Note: The cloning of lambs and monkeys is a documented FACT in our society, so it is not beyond the limits of possibility to suggest that a hi-tech alien culture might, unfortunately, succeed at cloning human beings. - Branton)

"Ted recalled a process whereby his original was killed. They first gave him a glowing, green, fiery substance to drink. It made him extremely nauseated. He vomited it immediately, and then they cut off his head [and his vital fluid was drained from his body into a container]. When his soul energy -- or whatever you want to call it -- came up out of his body, it remained attached to the body at this lumpy, glowing, green liquid area. It appeared to be unable to get free of that. They sucked it into a little black box, which was set on a counter while the aliens readied his new cloned body. Then they put probes into the shoulders, neck and feet of the new body to activate it. Once it began to breathe, the soul energy could be put into it. His soul energy, which had been stored in the little black box ever since they killed his first body, was introduced into the new body, and because the body was breathing, it was trapped there."

Go to top

(Note: During this abduction Ted encountered the other 'clones', a young boy and a girl. This took place inside a MASSIVE space station, dark green in color with 'spikes' reaching out of it like one might see on a old World War II floating 'mine'. Smaller ships would enter and exit via these 'tube' extensions. He only encountered a few humanoids on board the massive ship, a red-haired woman with little or no emotional expression, a dark haired hybrid type 'man' with a malevolent disposition, and a 'kind' man with short blond hair who attempted to nullify his apprehensions throughout it all. Although there were some 'Bigfoot' type people, some dwarfish hairy humanoids, large 'Mantis-like' insectoids with remarkably 'human-like' facial features, and numerous bizarre or grotesque beings which seemed to be genetic hybrids composed of both human-like and animal-like features within this massive station, the greater majority of the aliens were of the common reptilian-insectoid 'Grey' variety. - Branton)

DRACOS 'NEED' EMOTIONAL ENERGY AS FOOD?

"Evidently, a body that has had soul energy in it -- one that absorbs certain kinds of emotional energy -- is more nutritious than a 'flat' body that has not been through life processes. Let's say that, at eight or nine years old, you have lived some already, and you have some emotional storage going on already. If they kill your nutritionally 'yummy' body for their use and put your soul material into a cloned body that has not had life experience, then they can let you go through several more years in that body and build up emotional energy in it. Then it will be ready for them to eat, and they can continue the process again, many times."

(Note: The reason the reptilians feed off of human vital fluids in a vampirial-parasitic manner, it seems, is because they are in symbiotic relationship with astral parasites which use the reptilian bodies as 'hosts'. The astral parasites have absolutely no connection to the Creator or the Divine, who is the source of the essence of all life force/manna energy, and so they exist in an anti-life field/state and must steal life force second hand, much like a black hole or a sink hole or wallstreet or a cancer tumor vampirizes everything around them to feed their insatiable hunger... in so doing they grow ever larger and deformed, moreso than God or nature intended, and therefore 'require' ever more energy, which is usually stolen from the weak and defenseless. In a sense, these kinds of symbiotic aliens operate as individual cancer cells within a collective alien 'tumor', and they should be dealt with accordingly!!! - Branton)

PSYCHIC VAMPIRES AND INDUCED EMOTIONAL TRAUMA:

"Abductees are put through other kinds of programming and compulsions. The only commonality that I can see in all of them, so far, is that they all cause great upheaval and produce great amounts of emotional energy. And maybe tastier bodies. But certainly immediate energy production."

HOW THE ALIENS MIGHT CONTROL THE Go to top

"Personally, I believe one could control political leaders more easily with implants. Now, if they wanted to use one of their own souls (although some would debate whether these reptilians have souls at all, other than the astral entities possessing them - Branton), perhaps to inhabit the body of a politicians and work full-time through it, that could be done. Perhaps they could simply take the soul out and stick another soul in. They have the ability to retrieve what we call the soul, to store it in a container, and to put it back into another body. They can put it in any body they wish."

ANY POSITIVE (ETHICAL) ETs?

"I do accept there are intelligent forces that can contact and inform us -- perhaps to help us help ourselves."

(Note: Contactee Alex Collier says that there are. He was told by his alleged friends' from Zenatae Andromda - who like most federated human-occupied worlds are descended from the ancient Lyrans-Terran alliance in the times of Muria and Atlantis, to which most if not all human-like ETs can trace their ancestry - that three federated carrier ships, Andromedan, Pleiadean and Tau Cetian, had intercepted a huge Dow-Gray alien carrier ship that had emerged from the ocean floor and was trying to skip-planet with a load of hybrids, human children in cryogenic freeze, and literally thousands of human 'souls' that had been 'harvested' and which were discovered trapped-contained WITHIN SMALL ELECTROMAGNETIC BOXES, apparently to be used as ectoplasmic energy sources by the aliens. So we may very well have friends out there, which is probably why some reptilian ETs [for instance the 'greens' and the 'greys' within the Dulce - Los Alamos - Kirtland AFB megabase that are working with the 'OMEGA AGENCY'] insist that there are no 'nordic' or 'human federation' ETs out there. Of course the LAST thing these dracs desire is for us Terrans to join up with these federated human starfarers, especially in an alliance AGAINST their reptilian collective. - Branton)

UNDERGROUND ALIEN BASES:

"Abductees report seeing other humans in these facilities being drained of blood, being mutilated, flayed, and dismembered, and being stacked, lifeless, like cords of wood. Some abductees have been threatened that they, too, will end up in this condition if they don't cooperate with their alien captors."

(Note: We've had "Operation DESERT Storm"... anyone for "Operation DUNGEON Storm"! - Branton)

HUMAN CHILD ABDUCTIONS:

"Aliens come into homes and temporarily remove young children, leaving their distraught parents paralyzed and helpless. In cases where a parent has been able to protest, the aliens insist that 'The children belong to us.'"

RAPE AND FORCED SEXUAL ABUSE:

"Aliens have forced their human abductees to have sexual intercourse with aliens and even with other abductees while groups of aliens observe these performances. In such encounters, the aliens have sometimes disguised themselves in order to gain the cooperation of the abductee, appearing in such forms as Jesus, the Pope, certain celebrities, and even the dead spouses of the abductees."

CHILD SEXUAL ABUSE:

"Children abductees sometimes show a new
Go to top give interest in their own genitalia after alien encounters, saying that their abductors who come at night have been touching these parts of their bodies."

PAINFUL AND TERRIFYING MEDICAL PROCEDURES:

"Aliens perform extremely painful experiments or procedures on abductees, saying that these acts are necessary but giving no explanation why. Abductees' eyes are painfully removed from the sockets, allowing the aliens to scrape the area or implant devices into the area before the eyeballs are replaced, for instance. Some abductees are subjected to painful constrictions, often around the head, chest and extremities. Painful genitalia and anal probes are performed, on children as well as adults."

S0-CALLED 'ALIEN PROPHECIES':

"Aliens make predictions of an imminent period of global chaos and destruction. They say that a certain number of humans -- and the number varies dramatically from case to case -- will be 'rescued' from the planet in order to continue the species, either on another planet or back on earth after the destruction is over. Many abductees report that they don't believe their alien captors and foresee instead a much more sinister use of the 'rescued' humans.

(Note: This reminds me of the vision/dream one man related of a mass alien landing and 'harvest' amidst global chaos, with aliens encouraging humans to board their craft so as to escape to a better place, however in the vision/dream this man had the distinct impression that those who boarded these craft would be entering a living hell... Satan's rapture? - Branton)

COLLECTIVE HALLUCINATION OR COLLECTIVE EXPERIENCE?:

"In every instance from this list, there are multiple reports from unrelated cases, confirming that such bizarre details are not the product of a single deranged mind. These details are convincing evidence that, contrary to the claims of many UFO researchers, the abduction experience isn't limited to a uniform pattern of events. This phenomenon simply can't be explained [exclusively] in terms of cross-breeding experiments or scientific research into the human physiology.

SPIRITUALLY ENLIGHTENED?:

"And it becomes clear from these details that the beings who are doing such things can't be seen as spiritually enlightened, with the best interest of the human race in mind. Something else is going on, something far more painful and frightening, in many, many abduction encounters. There is a theory current in ufological research that says abductees who perceive their experiences in a negative way only do so because they themselves aren't spiritually or psychically advanced. Persons with higher cosmic development have positive alien encounters, so the theory goes, and those who have painful or frightening experiences are merely spiritual Neanderthals. This is a pet theory of researchers who claim that aliens, whether objectively real or not, serve as 'mirrors' of our spiritual nature, on an individual or a species-wide basis. Streiber has voiced this theory, for instance, in Majestic, where he says, 'In the eyes of the others [the aliens], we who met them saw ourselves. And there were demons there'.

(Note: On one segment of the STRANGE UNIVERSE TV show, Whitley Streiber commented on a reputed video-tape of a military interrogation of a reptilian 'grey' alien at Area-51. Streiber showed extreme rage and stated in essence that he was astonished that one of these "wonderful people" could be in such a situation, and that the history. Streiber did relate time and time again in his writings about the absolute stark terror and evil he encountered in relation to the aliens. He also stated in essence that the terror and pain consumed him to the degree that he felt that the 'old' Whitley disappeared and something else took its place. Could it be that 'Whitley Streiber' is no longer home, in a certain sense, and that the 'person' who reacted to the video was NOT exactly the same 'Whitley' who resided there before his major abduction experiences began? The use of pain, torture and terror is a common and well known means of mind-control and mental fragmentation among 'insiders'. In the throes of pain and emotional intensity or even sexual stimulation it is easy to induce hypnotic programming or even an alternate or "alter" personality within a mind-controlled subject. - Branton).

Having worked with so many decent, honest, positively oriented abductees, however, I believe this theory is wrong. It is worse than wrong -- it is despicable, as despicable as blaming a rape victim for the violence committed against her. This attitude [that they have negative experiences because they are not spiritually developed enough] leaves many abductees feeling doubly violated, first by the aliens who took them and then by the UFO researchers to whom they turn for explanations and help. But it is easy to understand why such a theory would be so popular. Humans have a deep need to believe in the power of good. We need for the aliens to be a good force, since we feel so helpless in their presence. And we need for some superior force to offer us a hope of salvation, both personally and globally, when we consider the sorry state of the world. I think the aliens know this about us -- they know that we want and hope for them to be benevolent creatures -- and they USE our desire for goodness to manipulate us. What better way to gain our cooperation than to tell us that the things they are doing are for our own good? But looking at the actions, the results of alien interference such as the long list above. There is a great discrepancy between what we desire from them and what they are doing to us."

BENEVOLENT KIDNAPPING?

"Not all abduction reports are filled with frightening or painful events, of course. Many people say that their alien encounters felt benevolent, that their ABDUCTORS treated them kindly or at least with a scientific detachment. Some abductees recall being told that they were 'special,' that they were 'chosen,' and that they have an important task to perform for the benefit of humanity. Given such a positive message, the abductees may ignore the fear and the pain of their encounters and insist to themselves and to others that a higher motive underlies the abduction experience. And, in some cases, all that an abductee REMEMBERS is a benevolent encounter and so has no reason to assume any negative action has occurred."

MORE ON SCREEN MEMORIES:

"Intensive research shows that at the core of the human-alien interaction there is a clear pattern of DECEPTION. We know, for instance, that "screen memories" are often used to mask an alien abduction. Such accounts abound, in which a person sees a familiar yet out-of-place animal, like a deer or owl, a monkey or a rabbit, and then experiences a period of missing time. The person often awakens later to find a new, unexplained scar on his body. Uneasiness about the encounter will persist, however, and far different memories may start to surface in dreams or flashbacks, and then the person seeks help to explain the uneasiness. Quite often, hypnotic regression is used to uncover the events behind the "screen memory," and that is when a typical alien abduction surfaces. The most recent research in which I've been involved has turned up yet a second sort of screening process. If it turns out to be accurate, then thousands of abduction cases are in urgent need of re-examination. The typical scenario of undergoing the regression usually results in penetration of the initial blocked memories. The abductee then recalls an encounter, hitherto unremembered, such as undergoing a physical examination of some sort, perhaps having body tissues removed or having a gynecological exam. Other typical reports include the taking of sperm and ova, of being told of an important task to be carried out, or of receiving a warning of upcoming disaster. And in most cases, both the abductee and the investigator come away from the hypnosis session feeling that they have discovered the truth about the experience. Rationalization leads them to believe that the aliens' purposes must be scientifically objective or benevolent. The less threatening and more benevolent the hypnotically recalled event seems, the more satisfied are the investigator and the abductee. "That wasn't so bad, now, was it? These beings are our friends, or at least they are not our enemies." And everyone goes away with a sense of relief. I have yet to hear of a researcher who actually questions the uncovered scenario. But from several recent cases, it is apparent that these recovered memories may well also be yet another screen, masking events that are much more reprehensible. I will explain one such case, to make the point clear."

A STRANGE REPORT.

"A man in his late 40's came to us to explore several alien-related events in his life, and in the interview he told of a strange, although not apparently alien-oriented, episode that had haunted him since childhood. When he was ten years old, his grandmother came to visit in his home, and since the house was small, she shared his bed on the first night of her visit. During the night, the boy was awakened by a loud male voice. He couldn't understand what the voice was saying, but it sounded angry and was addressing the grandmother lying beside him. The next morning, he asked his grandmother, "What was that voice in the bedroom last night?" His grandmother, with tears in her eyes, pulled him tightly to her and said, "That was the devil." She said nothing more about the episode, but she did insist that her son take her back to her own home immediately. It was an unreasonable request, and her son tried to talk her out of it. But the grandmother was adamant, and finally her son agreed to take her home the following day. The entire family made the trip of over a hundred miles back to the grandmother's farm, and within an hour of their arrival, the grandmother suffered a massive stroke and died. Ever since that event, the man had felt a heavy burden of guilt associated with his grandmother's death. Yet there was no conscious reason for him to have felt that way. The entire event was poignant and mystifying, but in all the alien encounters he had subsequently undergone, he had felt that the aliens were his friends and were helping him by expanding his psychic abilities."

[Interview continued. In response to a question about the 'psychic vampire' nature of the aliens, Karla states]:

KT: ...Yes. Now you are getting to why may be the crux of the 'harvest.' That may be that they not only need emotional energy, but also at least one faction [and I would be tempted, if I were to guess, that they would be reptoids] actually uses the physical bodies. They are trying hard to get us detached from our bodies by telling us that they are "only containers." Why? Because they eat our bodies. If a cow knew you were going to eat it, you would want to tell that cow [if they could understand], "Your body is not important. It doesn't matter."

[In response to a question about the spiritual nature of the Greys and the Reptiloids]:

KT: I think it is something to think about. I don't believe the greys have souls, but are more like 'Frankensteins' or 'zombies' or whatever term you want to use for the "living dead." When I have been with them, I have had an overwhelming feeling that they are not alive -- that they are dead. (Note:

Or... as investigator Val Valerian puts it, they have an "anti-life" field. - Branton)

Dr. Gregory L. Little has added the following in regards to Karla Turner's experiences:

Karla told of walking into her home at night when a being grabbed hold of her arm. The creature told her it was her mother, but Karla stated that it looked like a giant grasshopper. Another time, Karla was coming home through her back yard when she felt like she "...had hit an electric fence. I wasn't feeling right...wasn't moving right ...there was a glow everywhere...I stopped...and saw four gray beings standing side by side in my backyard. I assumed I was having a hallucination (but) I'm awake -- why? I felt I could see through them and they talked to me telepathically.

"'Greetings, we are your ancestors,' they said. 'We are a part of you, but we are real.'

"I couldn't move as I normally do," Karla continued. "Then two females behind me came up close -- they started buzzing."

"'They are giving you some instructions,' they told me."

We couldn't do it without your input. Now into our 33rd issue and going from strength to strength. This year we look forward to bringing you fascinating new articles and information pertaining to investigations, experiments etc. We are also considering incorporating new scientific finds from the academic world and a regular astronomical data section.

Now... As you know 2012 has been mentioned a lot over the last few years in regards doomsday type articles, predictions and craziness. Well, we have featured some of these predictions in this issue for you to digest. However, if I was asked, I would more than likely say, 'It's a load of hype and speculation'. But hey... Stranger things have happened. Who knows really for sure. Just in case though.... If nothing happens, then I've already wrote my article for January 2013 entitled 'I TOLD YOU SO'. Lol. Hope you enjoy this issue and continue to stay with us throughout this interesting year. Many Thanks and a Happy New Year to all.

SUB-EDITORIAL

A happy and prosperous new year to all Phenomena Magazine readers and contributors. So this is the year the world ends again again. December 21st is the general date suggested, so at least we will get full 12 issues out! Nibiru, the Comet Elenin, Harold Camping, Nostradamus, the Mayans, all names linked to the end of days, and all bullcrap. Yes a fantabulous array of charlatan 2012 media products have bogged us down. So I predict an influx of post apocalypse literature – 2013: what happens next etc.

Do the soothsayers take the Gregorian calendar change into account by the way? The world of the paranormal has been a tad quiet, but any day soon, Most haunted will return, along with its legion of experts. Today however, we have actually had the opportunity to look at several residential reports and monitor them correctly. The same applies to UFOlogical matters, all quiet, that is for the same old media has-beens selling their wears and dredging up long solved cases. All the best everybody, let's be a little bit more sensible this year.

SYNCHRONICITIES & EXPERIENCERS: THE BRIGITTE BARCLAY STORY

Shortly after my article about James Gilliland and ECETI appeared in print earlier this year (UFO Matrix Magazine Volume 1, Issue 04) I received an email from a woman in England saying that she'd like to talk with me. I didn't really think too much about this and got busy working on various things. Another email arrived two weeks later, this time more intriguingly saying that she would like to talk to me because she'd had a dream about me after reading my article. If I am being totally honest, I wondered if I had attracted a crazy person through my article. Nothing, however, could have prepared me for what was about to unfold.

A few weeks went by before we finally managed to speak. It turned out that this woman was Brigitte Barclay/Bridget Grant, one of the UK's better known UFO abductees - or 'experiencers' to coin the more modern (and politically correct?) term. Brigitte's alleged experiences spanned many years and two continents and appeared to be ongoing.

Brigitte began telling me about her dream. She said we were in a church and I was talking to her passionately about religion and ufology and that something appeared to be happening with my left eye. She watched as my eye moved back and forth and then a beam of white light shot out of it and she wondered if she should tell me. Unknown to her - and unnervingly to me - my left eye had been spasming involuntarily for the past few months. UFO Matrix had not printed my picture in my last article, yet on seeing my photograph Brigitte said she was looking at the same person that had been in her dream.

As we spoke it became obvious we had many things in common and a sudden wealth of coincidences and seemingly out of this world synchronicities began to present themselves. Brigitte emailed me some of her encounters that she'd documented. One was titled 'Topanga Tones' about an experience she had in Topanga, California in the early nineties. Her experience began with ringing in her ears and included a vision that showed her what appeared to be a graphical representation of a musical tone played through a monitor or TV screen.

Unknown to Brigitte, I had become fascinated with Topanga when I had arrived in the USA in 2006; so much so that I had written and recorded a piece of music called 'Topanga'. The track begins with tones that are as close as possible to the permanent ringing in my ears (tinnitus) that I have suffered with since the beginning of 2006. Brigitte explained that the tones I had used in my track were very close to the ones that she had heard during her experience.

Topanga is located in the Santa Monica mountains. It's a beautiful, rural and idyllic suburb of Los Angeles that feels a million miles from the hustle and bustle of nearby Hollywood and downtown LA. I had no idea at the time - nor did Brigitte at the time of her experience - that Topanga is a UFO hotspot. This is well documented in the 1999 book UFOs Over Topanga Canyon by Preston Dennett.

During the next several weeks I began to learn Brigitte's story, which involved a lifetime of encounters with UFOs and non-human entities. These included a lot of the usual stuff that comes with such encounters: scoop marks, possible screen memories, men in black, and unmarked black helicopters.

In the late nineties former Ministry of Defence UFO expert Nick Pope began work on 'The Alien Within', a book about Brigitte's encounters. During this time Nick did a large amount of research into Brigitte's life and experiences, even taking her to New York to work with renowned UFO abduction expert, the late Budd Hopkins. In 2000, nearing the conclusion of his work with Brigitte, Nick submitted a very compelling book outline to several publishers.

They were successful in receiving offers for the book, but due to personal reasons Brigitte felt the time wasn't right for her to go public and she pulled out. Although the project faltered, Nick and Brigitte remain close friends to this day.

As Brigitte and I got to know each other the coincidences continued. I learned about the village where she had her first encounters as a child, and the small village some miles away where she had her most recent encounter just last year. It suddenly dawned on me that I had mentioned both of these inconsequential villages in a recent article I'd written for Railways Illustrated magazine. I checked my copy and found that both of these tiny villages are mentioned one after the other at the very beginning of the article.

The train connection didn't stop there. Brigitte mentioned to me that her great grandfather was a Victorian steam locomotive designer. Knowing Brigitte's maiden name of Barclay, I immediately made the connection to Andrew Barclay - much to her surprise. As an interesting aside, Andrew Barclay had almost bankrupted his locomotive company by spending much of his money and manpower on building telescopes in order to satisfy his obsession with astronomy.

I believe I have had around fifty UFO sightings and several strange synchronicities around crop circles, but up to this point I did not claim to have ever seen a non-human entity. In the early nineties I read Abduction, the classic

NICK POPE (rough translation from Italian) - 'I think in fact that there may be several explanations for the phenomenon of alien abductions. Some cases are scams, others are attributable to some sort of hallucinations or obsessions. To this we add lucid dreaming, sleep paralysis, false memory syndrome, a number of other factors. However, this is not enough to explain all cases, and I suspect there are other factors at play here. Relied on scientific studies show that you are not in the presence of psychological disorders or fiction, it seems that even these, bringing to mind their experiences exhibit physiological responses (e.g. increased heart rate and respiration) not found in control groups of people certainly not given. I actually have work to do on this phenomenon during my work at the MoD, and my personal library contained about one hundred cases. One indisputable, involved a former model named Brigitte Barclay, with whom I worked for years.'

AFTER READING THROUGH DOCUMENTATION IN REGARDS BRIGITTE'S EXPERIENCES, I HAVE TO CONCLUDE THAT I WAS RATHER FASCINATED AND CURIOUS. I HAVE FOUND NO EVIDENCE TO DATE TO SUGGEST HER EXPERIENCES ARE FAKE IN ANY WAY...
STEVE MERA.

Brigitte Barclay is one of the UK's most high-profile UFO witnesses and abductees. She has worked with many of the world's leading researchers of the alien abduction phenomenon, including Budd Hopkins, Dolores Cannon and the late John Mack. She has also collaborated extensively with former Ministry of Defence official Nick Pope, who has described her case as one of the most interesting and compelling that he has come across. Brigitte Barclay has lived and worked in both the UK and the US and her story has been featured in national daily newspapers including The Sun and the Daily Mail, as well as in a variety of UFO magazines. She is currently working on a book and on a number of film and TV projects.

book on the subject by psychologist and Harvard professor John Mack. The book left me feeling perplexed, although I did find his conclusion interesting: that these experiences had some basis in physical reality and the patients he studied were not suffering any apparent delusion. However, the fact that hypnosis had been used as the centerpiece of his work had left me feeling somewhat lukewarm about the book and the subject itself. With this in mind, I experienced mixed feelings when Brigitte asked me if I wanted to take on the job of completing her book. She felt that the time was now right for her to go public; and given our apparent connection and the string of coincidences between us, she said it felt right that I should write the book.

I weighed up the thought that on the one hand it almost felt like we were being brought together by some higher power. On the other hand stood my skepticism, not of Brigitte, who seemed sincere in her beliefs, but of the abduction phenomenon as a whole. To be completely honest, I don't think I would have taken Brigitte's project on had it not been for the previous involvement by Nick Pope and others. Brigitte began scanning and sending over Nick's files and the details of her story became a lot clearer. It was during this period of receiving and digesting file after file that something strange happened to me.

I was walking my dogs with my friend Jenna on their usual route along the banks of the Willamette River in the suburbs of Portland, Oregon. It was twilight and we were walking down a hill when I observed what I first thought was a small grey dog on the road about one hundred yards ahead. One of my dogs, Tara, is nervous around other dogs, so I stopped to put her on a lead. With Tara safely on the lead, I looked up to see the greyish 'dog' rear up into a humanoid form. It wasn't a dog at all. I would say this being was just as tall as myself, if not taller. Suddenly, out of thin air, another one appeared. Before I could say anything the two beings floated off to the right over impassable scrub land. It was as if they weren't fully formed - they were translucent and not totally solid.

At that point I managed to get some words out. 'Fing hell Jenna! Aliens!' (I would like to point out that although these beings appeared to be the standard tall, grey type 'aliens', I do not take it for granted that these things were definitely extra-terrestrial in origin - this was just what came out of my mouth). Before we had time to discuss anything, I then perceived the two beings floating back the other way, a little farther down the lane and alongside a railroad track that runs parallel with the river.

Some time later, I developed another memory of seeing a being closer up, about 30 feet away. This puzzles me because my original memory - and the one confirmed by Jenna - was that once they disappeared I said 'let's go find them' and off we went towards where we had last seen the thin, ghost like figures. We didn't see anything further, so we decided to head back up the hill towards home. Suddenly, about half-way up the hill, every hair on my body stood on end and I couldn't wait to get the hell out of there. This wasn't the first time I had seen something strange in this area. My last UFO sighting was in October 2010 only a few hundred feet from this same spot. I saw a brown organic-looking UFO remain stationary about 50 feet off the ground. It was about four feet wide by four feet long and it shot off at an incredible speed and trajectory and made a high-pitched whistling sound as it did so. After the experience of seeing the two ghostly entities I had just had, another memory came to me of seeing a smaller entity whilst walking the dogs in the same area sometime last year. For whatever reason I had forgotten about that until this new experience. Jenna also recalled a time when I said to her I'd just seen a small entity while walking with her in this same area. I have no memory of saying this or of that incident to this day. Something about this latest experience made me begin to take Brigitte more seriously. It almost felt as if it had been played out for my benefit. Was this designed to sway me into pursuing the book and follow Brigitte's story? It certainly had a profound effect on me. Can someone who is witnessing strange phenomenon themselves remain an impartial researcher of that phenomenon? Could I effectively keep a rational, objective, and unbiased view of Brigitte's story? Was I about to become a part of that story? Mindful and cautious of all of this, I began forging ahead with the research for the book, and I present the following as a brief sample of some of Brigitte's experiences thus far. My thanks go to Nick Pope for doing much of the original research into Brigitte's experiences prior to 2000.

PATIENT ZERO TO PAGE THREE

Brigitte has led a full and interesting life by anyone's standards regardless of the UFO phenomenon; however Brigitte's UFO/non-human encounters are interesting and possibly unique in several respects. Firstly, there are other witnesses who can back up several of her claims of seemingly strange encounters.

THOUGH THERE ARE MANY RATIONAL EXPLANATIONS TO EXPLAIN AWAY MANY SO CALLED EXPERIENCES REPORTED BY CONTACTEE'S THROUGHOUT THE WORLD. AROUND 25% OF THEM STILL REMAIN WITHOUT A RATIONAL EXPLANATION. THEREFORE SHOULD WE NOT CONSIDER THE POSSIBILITY...?

Secondly, there are a number of unusual medical conditions (with records) that add significant weight to her story. Thirdly, Brigitte's encounters have, for the most part, occurred whilst fully awake and neither in bed nor having just awoken from sleep. I believe this rules out sleep paralysis, dreams, or anything of that kind.

An interesting aspect to this case occurred before Brigitte was even born. Brigitte's mother had been rhesus-negative, a blood condition that used to have potentially fatal consequences for some children of rhesus-negative mothers who could die of haemolytic disease of the newborn. Brigitte's mother was actually the first person in the world to be given the anti-D injection which solved this problem. This had come about as Dr Colin Mantell – the pioneering professor who developed this lifesaving technique – was actually Brigitte's godfather. Thanks in part to Dr Mantell, Brigitte and many other babies were able to survive. The link between the abduction phenomenon and human blood type has long been speculated upon. Does Brigitte's unique position as 'patient zero' in this groundbreaking project mean she has been further subject to interest and observation by others?

Brigitte grew up in the 1970s in a small, sleepy fishing village in Devon, England. She remembers seeing 'little people' coming into her room on occasion and both of her brothers also witnessed a UFO by the nearby railway line in the village where they lived. Brigitte frequently saw a strange, tall figure dressed entirely in black in the garden of the family home. After one of these sightings, Brigitte noticed a large, deep scoop mark on her right thigh which is obvious and visible to this day. Notably this person or being was also witnessed on one occasion by her brother who ran down the garden to try and find him. More sinister possibilities about this figure came out during hypnosis sessions with Budd Hopkins in New York City in 1998.

On another significant occasion Brigitte recalls meeting a little oriental girl with striking, almond shaped eyes in her village. The girl showed Brigitte what appeared to be Chinese or oriental money and then pointed to her house. They arranged to meet the following day at the same place... except the house had gone and in its place was a circular 'gazebo' with lanterns adorning the edge and with something like shimmering water beneath that reflected the light from the lanterns. To the mind of a child, could the oriental girl have been a non-human entity and the gazebo a UFO? Or were these screen memories given to young Brigitte to make the whole experience more palatable?

As a teenager Brigitte was rebellious and restless and couldn't wait to escape the confines of life in a small rural village. With her sights set high, she headed up to London to reach for a lifestyle a million miles away from the green hills and sleepy estuaries of Devon. Brigitte was instantly successful in becoming a page three model. This led to other assignments – becoming a Penthouse Pet, appearing in Playboy, doing TV adverts and traveling around the world. She mingled with pop stars and actors, dated celebrities, lived in a glamorous apartment, and collected vintage cars that were hired out for film and TV shows. She even appeared in the movie 'The Rainbow Thief' alongside Peter O'Toole, Omar Sharif and Christopher Lee.

THE 405 INCIDENT and TOPANGA

Brigitte relocated to California in the early nineties. Tired and dissatisfied with modeling, she became a make-up artist in Los Angeles. It was here in February of 1993 in the LA suburb of Brentwood just outside of Hollywood that she had a significant encounter. Interestingly, this happened around sunset during the evening rush hour on a slip road off the 405 freeway. Brigitte was driving with a female friend in her car when they both witnessed a solid, metallic flying saucer with a red/orange glow on the underside only five to seven meters away. Brigitte recalls 'I felt strange before we even saw the UFO. I've never had a feeling like that in my stomach before. My hands were gripping the steering wheel like glue and there was dead silence all around'.

Brigitte then turned a corner and recalls seeing the object in her rear window. She felt very strongly that they should drive to the top of a hill and see if they could see it. They arrived at a viewpoint but didn't see the UFO again. The girls then drove to her friend's house some five blocks away, with Brigitte in a state of shock and disorientation. Too agitated to go inside they decided to head home. Brigitte felt drunk and had difficulty balancing and driving. Once they exited the driveway they noticed a black car up ahead that seemed out of place. It was a vintage car but was in mint, showroom condition. Hypnosis sessions would later reveal that this car was incredibly troubling for Brigitte. She likened the blackness of the car (including a unique black chrome-like radiator) to the blackness of her abductors' eyes. Paradoxically, Brigitte's

UNEARTHLY CHILD; THE BRIGITTE BARCLAY STORY

By Lorin Cutts and Brigitte Barclay

Foreword by Nick Pope

'Unearthly Child' tells the fascinating story of one of the UK's most high profile contactees – Brigitte Barclay – and her lifetime of extraordinary UFO sightings and alien experiences. She claims at least seventeen close-encounters and her experiences would appear to be ongoing.

The roots of this book lie in an extensive four year investigation carried out by former Ministry of Defence UFO expert and media commentator, Nick Pope.

Nick wrote at the time, 'this investigation is the most in-depth study ever carried out into a particular case, certainly in the UK, if not the world. No case like this exists, whether in the files of the Ministry Of Defence, or on the books of any civilian UFO researcher'.

In 'Unearthly Child' Lorin Cutts takes up the story where Nick left off... and with full access to his files and research, updates Brigitte's case to the present day to tell her story for the very first time.

Alien abduction claimants (also called abductees and experiencers) are people who have claimed to have experienced the paranormal abduction phenomenon. The term "abduction phenomenon" describes claims of non-human creatures kidnapping individuals and temporarily removing them from familiar terrestrial surroundings. The abductors, usually interpreted as being extraterrestrial life forms, are said to subject experiencers to a forced medical examination that emphasizes the alleged experiencer's reproductive system.

The first alien abduction narrative to be widely publicised was the Betty and Barney Hill abduction in 1961. Since that time, the credibility and mental health of alleged experiencers has taken on great importance to those seeking to determine the veracity of the abduction claims. Mainstream academics and members of the skeptics movement generally doubt that the phenomenon occurs literally as reported, and have proposed a variety of alternate explanations.

Such skeptics often argue that the phenomenon might be a modern-day folk myth or vivid dreams occurring in a state of sleep paralysis. On the contrary ufologists and paranormal researchers hold positions closer to the face-value of abduction claims. The discovery of common psychological traits shared by abductees would have the potential to determine a neurological explanation for the claims, while other commonalities or differences may serve to reinforce that the claims of the experiencers do in fact correspond with objective reality.

conscious memory of this black car is that she had the words 'so I never forget' come to her when she saw it. On the way home and at exactly the same place where they had seen the UFO earlier, they now observed four or five unmarked, black, military style helicopters heading in the direction of the departed UFO.

Many things about this encounter are perplexing. Did other people see the UFO? If so, why did the 405 freeway not come to a grinding halt? Was missing time involved but not realised by the girls? Much more would appear to have taken place, according to later hypnosis sessions with Budd and Nick. These sessions suggested the distinct possibility that this may have evolved into a full blown abduction scenario. One thing that strikes me as interesting about one particular hypnosis session is that Brigitte recalled being taken out of the car and taken someplace else where a non-human being handed her a part human-looking hybrid baby. Rather than believing that this baby was hers - which is the typical response in encounters that involve cross-breeding - she acted confused and refused to bond with it. Brigitte's response is notable in that it varies significantly from the script of many abduction scenarios. Many abductees report feeling a huge sense of joy or love on being reunited with their alleged, long-lost offspring. Why would Brigitte refuse to believe this?

An interesting aside to this encounter is that the girl who was in the car with Brigitte has never been able to be traced. As a reaction to this experience, both women left Los Angeles shortly afterwards and lost touch with one another. Brigitte and others have spent years trying to trace her passenger but without success. There are other witnesses to Brigitte's encounters that will be included in my research, but tracing this woman is something on which I will be focusing particular attention. Only two weeks ago an interesting lead appeared out of seemingly thin air. I am currently following this up and remain optimistic that we may yet be able to locate Brigitte's acquaintance in the 405 encounter.

Brigitte continued to have UFO experiences after she left Los Angeles to stay in Santa Cruz. During a later visit to the Los Angeles area she had her 'Topanga Tones' episode as already mentioned. Also whilst in Topanga, Brigitte felt very uneasy one evening, like something wasn't right. She developed a gynecological condition that meant she was rushed to the doctor. Medical records of this incident are inconclusive; the doctor surmised that the only thing that could rationally explain her condition was being bitten or stung by an insect, but Brigitte is adamant that this wasn't the case.

THE RETURN

In May of 1993, a couple of months after the 405 encounter, Brigitte returned to the UK to be closer to her family. Here she found time to try and make sense of her experiences in the USA and contacted various people within the UFO community. It was through this process that Brigitte eventually met Nick Pope and this is where he became interested and involved with this extraordinary case. A number of years passed without any significant UFO events in Brigitte's life, but this changed in 2010 when she had two close UFO sightings within two weeks - the last one being by a large railway viaduct near her home at the time. She wondered what this could mean after such a long break. Two weeks after her last UFO sighting she went to her doctor complaining of a lump in her ovary area. Her doctor was unsure of what was happening and referred her to a specialist who, in turn, admitted her to hospital to be urgently operated on. Brigitte had developed an extremely rare gynecological disorder. Is this the kind of physical evidence that we can expect to see from individuals who have gone through real, physical abduction procedures over the course of many years? Or is this unique to Brigitte? I don't want to go into the details of this unusual condition here, because my research is ongoing. Whereas it may be impossible to categorically link this and other medical conditions of Brigitte's to the UFO/abduction phenomenon, given Brigitte's alleged encounters, I still believe this condition could be extremely noteworthy. In both Brigitte's childhood experiences and the later Los Angeles incidents it would appear they might involve a move into some kind of parallel reality. If this is the case, at what point does the experiencer's reality change from that of others' around them? It is the almost dream-like descriptions and series of events in many of these encounters that make the abduction/experiencer subject so difficult for many 'nuts and bolts' ufologists and for those of a more scientific persuasion. There is much more to reveal and I have only given a brief taste of Brigitte's story in this article. It has been a fascinating experience going through the notes and research relating to this case. I currently keep an open mind, and am trying hard not to draw conclusions about any of Brigitte's alleged encounters just yet. There is a wealth of information to take in from medical records, witness testimonies, notes, research and writing by Nick Pope, and recordings of the hypnosis sessions with Budd Hopkins and Dolores Cannon. More than a decade later are we any closer to understanding the true nature of these experiences and the way they interact with our reality? Are we any closer to finding out the truth about who or what is behind this bizarre aspect of the UFO phenomenon?

I will leave you with a quote from Nick Pope's original notes for 'The Alien Within' back in 2000. 'This four year investigation is the most in-depth study ever carried out into a particular case, certainly in the UK, if not the world. No case like this exists, whether in the files of the Ministry Of Defence, or on the books of any civilian UFO researcher'.

The fact that this extraordinary case appears to be very much ongoing means that I am forging ahead with further research and I hope to have the book ready for publication in 2012.

Brigitte will be speaking at various conferences (including some joint presentations with myself or Nick Pope) in the UK and USA through 2012.

ABOUT LORIN CUTTS

Lorin's interest in esoterica began after his first UFO encounter, which he experienced whilst traveling in Portugal in 1993. This led to an obsession with ufology, and he began reading and collecting as many books as he could on the subject. In 1996 he began researching some of the UK's best multiple witness sightings and contributed his findings to several publications.

1996 was also the year he paid his first visit to a crop circle. He happened to be on holiday in Wiltshire at the same time that the mother of all crop formations - the Julia Set - appeared in a field next to Stonehenge.

He later moved to the area and had many more interesting sightings and experiences.

In 2006 Lorin developed tinnitus. Western medicine couldn't provide any relief for his condition, and he eventually turned to frequency healing as both a personal interest and as a way of alleviating the tinnitus.

Having trained as a sound engineer this path seemed the perfect way of blending his interest in sound with his love of more esoteric subjects.

Now based in Portland, Oregon, Lorin splits his time between working on the railroad, music production, freelance writing and researching UFOs and frequency healing...

Those 3 hours will rock your worldview.

I seriously suggest reading this book. I have read many similar works which touch on this subject, but no one does it quite like Lloyd Pye. He goes to great endeavours to simplify scientific jargon and terminology. In this easy to understand version with helpful pictures, Lloyd takes you on a fascinating journey into the world of evolution, religion, humanity and that burning question we all have... 'Where did we come from?' Probably the most intriguing book I've ever read. Get your E-Book copy today!

THE 2012 PREDICTIONS

List of Predictions Plus Mayan Calendar 2012

Unless you don't give a care about it, there are a lot of end of the world 2012 predictions that are being spread out these days. We'll identify a few of the most prevalent predictions.

1. 2012 predictions regarding Extraterrestrial Beings – the question is, do this so-called December 21, 2012 end of the world predictions an effect of spending so much time on that idiot box disregarding the truth behind it? Another is in what way they did able to arrive with this doomsday prophecy of an alien invasion? More and more stories of sightings and abductions emerge from the different parts of the world one can deduce that it must be true. However, the real question to be asked is, are these alien being originate from distant planets or do they came straight right out from another dimension? To find out the truth behind this, FOLLOW THIS LINK HERE and be awestruck.

2. The Prophecies of Armageddon – the world's civilization had already experienced two grotesque world wars. Would this consequently mean that we're going to have another World War, a final battle of good and evil this coming 2012? Will this be the cause of the end of the world? This prediction differs greatly to other end of the world apocalypse because this time, it involves prophecies from the Bible. Biblical prophecies are often right about its predictions. There are over 300 prophecies telling about the birth of Christ and indeed, it is fulfilled. Although the Bible doesn't directly speak of an "Armageddon Day," it does however, refer to a time of GREAT TRIBULATION here on earth. In addition to that, the Bible also foretold about earthquakes, famine, disease, floods and bloodsheds.

Although the events of the heaven are not for us to control, the Bible does state about God using the cosmic to manifest his judgment here on earth before the coming of the final Day of Judgment. Revelation chapter 16, verse 21 tells of a disaster brought by cosmic elements like hailstones. Furthermore, Matthew speaks of the sun darkening and the moon failing to give its light while the stars are falling fast towards the earth. While the Bible speaks of this horrible judgment on earth, it does also speak about hope of evading this inevitable wrath. It is not solely about end of the world apocalypse predictions but is something more terrifying.

3. Stories of SCIENTIFIC EXPERIMENTS on splitting the atoms – this is the question, will the destruction of earth be brought by a mad scientist? It appears that there is a proposed large-scaled experiment to commence on the coming 2012. This could be worthy to be included in the 2012 prediction list. Today's affluent particle physicists plan on colliding electrons and positrons in a very long tunnel that measures 50 kilometers utilizing 1 trillion electron volt energy to launch these particles to travel close the speed of light. The objective: discovery and creation of the antimatter. The result: unknown. It could possibly destroy the fragile balance of the universe or worse. The question regarding the predictions about the end of the world in December 21, 2012 because of an experiment may not be plausible; we think so.

4. Regarding the ancient Mayan Calendar – coincidentally, the ancient Mayan calendar runs out of date on December 21 2012 and it is said that they have some information to which only themselves knew. From that run-out of date scenario springs out the so-called Mayan Calendar 2012 Apocalypse. This prophecy did somehow made through the top in the countless lists of apocalypse predictions and the end of the world prophecies. The thing is, could it be direct basis for the 2012 end of the world predictions the shortage of date in the Mayan calendar? The Mayans themselves could have held importance on that 2012 date but do they exactly believe in a 2012 apocalypse?

The strange Mayan beliefs about life and cosmos may seem to fascinate us but there are still other bizarre traditions and beliefs that they practice in their times which may shock us. The Mayans particularly believe on the sun, being a god that draws its power from human sacrifices – to facilitate this practices they let themselves fall under the influence of certain hallucinogenic drugs for them to do those so-called autosacrifices (suicide). Having said, it is suggested that one should be cautious into believing anything of these ancient Mayan practices as well as calendars...

5. DISEASE – a close possibility. We have witnessed how swift a pandemic can spread countries by countries, continent to other continent, causing unimaginable deaths to humanity. In connection to this, there have been rumors boiling around referring to some threat of another pandemic that will strike in the coming years. But can we say in entirety that the end of the world apocalypse will fall accurately on December 21, 2012 because of a worldwide pandemic? Definitely, not.

6. SOLAR FLARES – Solar flares is another doomsday prediction that made its way on the list for our 2012 end of the world predictions. Solar flares are universal occurrence that happens in cycle. NASA was able to point out that our sun will take have its turn of flaring sometime around 2012 or 2013. The date and the extent of the solar flare are still yet unknown. What is exact is that earth life is greatly dependent to the sun and is consequently of direct effect to the sun's activity. Even in the Bible, it is cited that the sun will have its role in the fulfillment of the end of the world apocalypse. Logically speaking, solar activities can affect earth life more in the coming years, including the year 2012 but that doesn't mean that this solar flare can bring the end of the world exactly on December 21 2012.

7. BIO WARFARE – is another 2012 predictions to the world's end. But we have to first consider how will biological warfare become the means of earth's end? Biological warfare is a threat that will always remain as long as there are crooked, selfish, hateful world leaders that remain in power. Having that said, we cannot entirely deduce that the end of the world apocalypse will be brought about by this biological warfare in the exact December 21 2012 date. People must see it as only a wicked means to scare the population.

8. METEOR or ASTERIOD STRIKE – for the record, there are already meteors that struck the surface of the earth since the beginning. Could we also deduce that a giant asteroid will strike on the planet thus bringing the 2012 end of the world apocalypse? Some people predict that we are already overdue for a meteor strike, making the year 2012 the most likely date for its strike. So far, NASA sighted the biggest threat an asteroid called Apophis. Nevertheless, December 21 2012 is not its arrival date is even actually Level 0 basing on the Torino scale. They calculated and they found out that it will pass closely around 2029 while having the possibility for impact on 13th of April year 2036 with the probably of 1 in 40,000. Asteroid or meteor strikes are still a threat astronomers anticipate but it doesn't entirely imply a 2012 predictions for earth's doomsday.

9. PLANET X – other observers also seen a certain planet, the PLANET X: NIBIRU. It is about two-third's of the earth's size. It is said that when it pass through within our solar system (guess what, on December 21 2012) can cause polar axis shifting here on earth. Given the truth behind it, still the process can take for up to 5,000 long years. This obviously tells us that having a Planet X pass by our territory seems an irrational reason for the end of the world apocalypse.

10. NOSTRADAMUS – the planet Nibiru and its passing through the solar system has also been mentioned to the prophecies or quatrains of NOSTRADAMUS. Little did we know that for many times, his predictions are often "tweaked" to suit with the world's present catastrophes. Can we be sure about Nostradamus's apocalypse predictions and the end of the world? Nostradamus was already known for his clever verses but can we say that he is a prophet?

EUROPE'S ROSWELL- A UFO CRASH IN MID WALES.

On a dark winter's night in January 1983, the sleepy Welsh village of Llanilar near Aberswyth was allegedly buzzed by a strange flying craft, which hit trees, scattered shiny metal debris over four fields and flew off apparently unaffected.

One farmer witnessed the debris and clean up operation; one national newspaper carried the story; one civilian investigation team made it to the site; one collection of strange metallic debris remains. This is Mark Olly's trip into the world of UFO folklore and investigation into the claims of the alleged UFO crash. My friend and colleague Mark Olly is an author, musician, historian, archaeologist and lecturer. Best known for writing and presenting the ITV Granada/Sky History Channel's popular television series "Lost Treasures." Here he presents this first investigation in a series of internationally important hidden mysteries.

THE ANGUISHED MAN UPDATE

I had to take the painting out of storage for an interview with a TV show so I decided to once again record overnight. I recorded for six hours and along with the usual noises I recorded a smoke like mist (see link below). At first it looks like smoke rising then it suddenly seems to take another form and change direction. There is no way there could have been any smoke or mist in that room.

The footage can be seen on Youtube at:

<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=s52Y3qcMGDA>

The painting will be featured on the new season of William Shatner's Weird Or What.

Previously featured in Phenomena Magazine: The story of the Anguished Man Painting and the paranormal disturbances that surround it are truly fascinating and one which is most certainly worthy of further study...

POLTERGEISTS

FEAR FEEDERS AT THEIR WORST

We've all heard about Poltergeist infestations. Brought to mind my Spielberg's famous movie by the same title. But how many have actually investigated and seen this destructive force first hand? It's true to state that Poltergeist infestations are rare and often wrongly termed. For me, in 27 years of investigating paranormal claims from around the country, I have come face to face with this phenomenon twice.... Yes... only twice.

Demonstrating how truly rare these incidents are. Parapsychological studies indicate a catalyst or focus are often responsible for such occurrences. Thought to be a suppressed psychokinetic energy manifesting itself in adolescent individuals at times of stress or vexation. Yep... I've heard and read a lot about such theories and... there certainly could be something to it. But for many, the weight of such theories are considered light and inconclusive evidence points them towards a more spiritualistic belief.

Some may use such names as Entities, Demons, Fallen Angels or just generally, Bad Spirits. But tests carried out by establishments like MAPIT have confirmed that a reduction in stress in the said environment often results in fewer paranormal incidents taking place. Thus, I have to agree that, poltergeist's, whatever they are, have the capacity to feed on emotion and fear and then possible utilise it to create more disturbances, which in turn are witnessed by those in the environment who become fearful.

A vicious cycle you could say... Do poltergeist's truly intend to harm?, or do they simply want you to think that, so you become fearful? Surveys undertaken suggest that physical harm in such cases are extremely few and in all cases, those living in the environment are experiencing vexation and fear. I have included a prime example of how this phenomena can manipulate and terrorise a seemingly normal family in an attempt for personal gain.

That gain being what it feeds on...

FEAR!

Poltergeists.

It would seem that poltergeist infestations a rare and their is also evidence of the phenomena being progressive in nature. Starting with smaller and sometimes insignificant disturbances and then gradually building into more productive and traumatic experiences. Investigators throughout years of study now recognise a pattern to such disturbances and have managed to document levels of disturbances.

Susan Lewis and family loved their new home. Susan, along with her daughter Jamie had moved in with Susan's new partner Matt and his daughter Marie. Jamie liked having Marie around; she said 'It was like having a younger sister, and we did everything together'. Susan described Matt as an intelligent, kind and funny guy who she loved very much. To her, this was a chance to start fresh. Marie and Jamie became very close which helped Susan's and Matt's relationship grow. Everything was wonderful. A few weeks after moving in, Susan recalled the first unusual incident... She walked into the kitchen to find a peanut butter jar on its side and dripping over the worktop, down the cupboards and pooling on the floor. She immediately thought that one of the girls had made a mess. As she cleaned it up she noticed something quite odd. The peanut butter was dripping and a puddle of the stuff was on the floor. It was as if it had been melted. Susan confronted the girls who both denied knowledge of it. In fact, Jamie thought her mother was joking. The whole thing was a bit of a mystery and soon forgotten...

It was only a few days afterwards when the family came home to find stacked and arranged cans of food in the kitchen and up the staircase. Pens and pencils were arranged in certain patterns. Hair-brushes and shampoo's were also found arranged in the main bathroom. There was even tins of food and ornaments found in the microwave oven.

Amusingly, Susan and Jamie suspected Marie of doing it, yet Matt thought Jamie was responsible and doing it to get attention. Marie was a few years younger than Jamie and when questioned nor her or Jamie claimed to know anything about it. Susan was still not convinced that something supernatural was responsible. Most of the incidents happened at night and in the early hours, then one day... everything changed.

Marie had gone into Jamie's bedroom in hope of getting Jamie to help her with her homework. Jamie placed her cup of coffee on the side near Marie and turned to let their dog in as it was scratching at the bedroom door. It must have taken her only a few seconds. She turned back and stood there puzzled.

Her cup of coffee was now on her bed and its contents spilled all over the bedding and pillows. Jamie immediately shouted at Marie thinking she had done it whilst her back was turned. Yet Marie was adamant that she had not done it, nor seen or heard it happen. Jamie didn't believe her and was rather angry. She grabbed her bedding and pillow slips and put them in the washing basket. Jamie came back into her bedroom with a cloth and some bleach and had decided to have a good clean.

She bent down and closed her draws placing the bleach on top of her unit. As she turned, just for a second or two, she heard a thud. Both Jamie and Marie turned around to find all the draws open again and the bottle of bleach on its side emptying itself onto the bedroom carpet. Jamie let out a scream, shouting for her mother. Susan came rushing in. She could clearly see that the girls were upset. Jamie was just about to explain to her mother what had happened when a small figurine of a horse shot off a shelf and flew across the room and landed on the floor. The odd thing was it all happened so fast and when Susan look down at the figurine, it was stood up on its legs, in the same pose it was in whilst on the shelf.

Then all of a sudden, everything on the shelves just shot off towards them. Jamie remembered screaming and all of them scrabbling to the door in absolute terror. Susan had seen it with her own eyes. Clearly Marie was 'Not' responsible. It was at this very point Susan knew she had a poltergeist in the house. Susan was shook up, but that was nothing compared to what happened in the following months...

Things got worse. Objects and items were found twisted and bent, food was found to have been thrown around the rooms. Sauce bottles were emptied of their contents over the walls, ceilings and furniture. Pans and pots were found lined up, starting with the smallest and ending with the largest and all their handles pointing in the same direction. A wok was sitting at the front of them as if replicating a military parade. Jam filled biscuits were found stuck to the wall in unusual symmetric patterns. Every room was affected. The bathroom mirrors were covered in paint from an old tin kept under the sink in the kitchen. Doors would bang all night long. The oven door would constantly rattle and the outside screen door would regularly open and slam shut of its own accord. There were also problems with the lights, they would sometimes all switch off and not turn back on for hours.

An electrician visiting the property carried out checks and concluded their electrics were in perfect working order. This uninvited invader to their home was causing disturbances daily and it was now starting to take its toll on the family. Matt often worked nights and was rather skeptical. He believed Jamie's was the cause of the disturbances and often thought Susan and the girls were exaggerating their claims.

The disturbances became common. On one particular evening Susan and the girls arrived home after shopping to discover long drawn out lines and arrows scribbled all over the walls and ceilings. The arrows pointed in all directions, some down to the floor and some pointing towards the central heating vents that ran up to the loft. Susan believed this 'thing' was trying to communicate and had convinced Matt to check out the loft. Matt still skeptical reluctantly agreed but could find nothing out of place up there. He accused Susan of her imagination running away with itself.

However, Susan was convinced she could communicate with it and possible get it to stop bothering them. Susan visited a friend about a week later who she had confided in. Susan's friend convinced her to make a piece offering with it and ask for it to leave. So, on arriving home she arranged candles on the fireplace and lit some scent sticks. She grabbed a small cat figurine she had been fond of and along with the girls attempted to communicate with this 'thing'. Holding out the figurine in her hands, Susan spoke out 'I offer you this piece offering, we do not want to harm you, we do not want you to be scared of us and we do not want to be scared of you'... Suddenly Susan's concentration was broke by Matt, who had walked in on the ritual. 'What the hell's going on?' Shouted Matt. Susan tried to explain what she was doing and that she was trying to help the situation but Matt wouldn't have it. He was really angry. He called it 'talking with the Devil'. He shouted 'this is not happening in my house' and at that grabbed the figurine and walked to the back door.

Susan and the girls were still pleading with him to let them finish what they had started, but Matt was determined. He swung the backdoor open, raised his arm and threw the figurine down the garden. Susan and the girls were screaming 'No', as they watched it fall onto their lawn.

Tears ran down their faces as they followed Matt back into the living room where he came to an abrupt halt. Matt stood there in amazement looking towards the fireplace. There, sat between the candles was the figurine he had thrown out onto the back lawn only seconds ago.

It somehow had mysteriously and instantaneously appeared. 'Oh my God! Oh my God', screamed Jamie. None of them could believe their eyes. Matt stormed over to the figurine and grabbed it from the mantle. Susan and the girls had their hands up screaming, 'don't break it, don't do it'. Jamie screamed out, 'If you break it, things will get worse'. At that Matt raised his arms and slammed the figurine to the floor smashing it to bits. Susan screamed 'No'... But it was too late. The figurine was in pieces. Matt stormed out of the house leaving Susan and the girls distraught and sobbing. They were terrified at the thought of this thing taking its anger out on them. Susan feared retaliation;.. And sure enough... it did!

That night Jamie had gone into the kitchen to get a drink and suddenly let out a scream. Susan and Marie ran in and turned the kitchen light on. They were horrified to see the word 'CAT' scribbled on the walls, ceiling and even the fridge. The scribble was in blue crayon, yet Susan and the girls could not recall having any crayons. Clearly, this 'thing' was angry with them. The very thing Susan

Poltergeists.

There have been numerous reported poltergeist disturbances throughout the UK. The best known is more than likely the Enfield Poltergeist Case. I have in 28 years of investigation only investigated around three cases. Two of which can be found on the MAPIT website. Entitled The Stockport Poltergeist and The Rochdale Poltergeist. Details of the investigations can be found under MAPIT investigations on our main page.

Poltergeists.

Throughout years of investigation, a number of interesting statistics have been concluded. It was seen that when object manipulation takes place, rarely are items seen to have travelled upwards. Most items either fly off the walls or shelves to the floor, traverse horizontally, or move across surfaces. It seems that the phenomenon has some difficulties maintaining a defy of gravity...

feared. It had gone on a rampage yet again, food was thrown around the kitchen, a mix of flour, milk, sauce, pasta and sugar filled the floor and covered the cupboards.

They had all been sat in the living room five minutes earlier and had heard nothing strange whilst all hell was breaking loose in the kitchen. They sat on the kitchen floor trying to clean the mess when Marie noticed something that chilled her to the bone. Amongst the mess on the floor were 'footprints... Susan screamed 'Oh my God!' as Marie pointed them out. Jamie grabbed her camera and took a number of photographs fearing no one would ever believe them. The footprints were about the same length as Jamie's foot but very wide and showing only three fat toes. What ever made these prints was clearly 'Not Human'. Marie was panicking, thinking, whatever made those prints, was in the house with them. Susan explained 'we all just wanted to get up and leave, but we had nowhere to go. We were stuck there not knowing what to do'.

Susan was struggling to hold down her job at a local office. The stress was tremendous and now her and the girls were suffering from sleep deprivation. Too scared to even close their eyes at night in fear of what might come at them in the dark. Matt refused to talk about it and was staying out more regularly. The girls were trying their best to be out a lot as they were so scared of being at home. Matt and Susan's relationship was getting worse and they were starting to drift apart. Their lives were in tatters... When would this end?..

'After it wrecked my house, it started on the pet's, said Susan. They had heard a terrible commotion in the kitchen one evening and initially thought that the two pet cats were having some sort of squabble, but on investigation only one of their cats was in the kitchen. The other was outside near the front door. It sat there next to the kitchen cooker and was absolutely soaked. It was as if it had been dunked in a barrel of water, yet there was no water in the sink and the bathroom door was shut. They had only seen the cat clean and dry minutes earlier. It was a real mystery.

The cats along with the pet dog would often shown signs of discomfort and looked about the rooms as if watching something invisible move about. The pet dog would often bark at the corner of the living room and at Jamie's on suit bathroom door which was in her bedroom. Jamie had got locked in her bathroom only weeks earlier and Matt thinking it was a faulty lock removed the handle.

A few weeks later one of the cats had a little of six kittens, but... slowly but surely they started to die, one by one. A local vet could not find a reason for their sudden malnutrition and death. Jamie had sat up several nights with them in hope of getting them better, but it was no good. All the kittens mysteriously died and were buried in the back yard. Susan began to worry 'Maybe this wasn't going to stop with the animals'...

About a week later, Susan was working late at the office and Matt was also away working leaving Jamie and Marie at home. Jamie had to run an errand and reluctantly left Marie at home alone. Since it had been quiet for the last few days with very little disturbances taking place, Jamie thought it would be alright to leave Marie alone watching TV as she was only going to be about 20 minutes. This was a decision she was soon to regret...

Marie was watching one of her favourite TV shows in the lounge. As she snuggled up on the settee the TV suddenly started to switch on and off. Marie instantly panicked thinking the worst and lent forward to grab the TV remote from the coffee table. Just as she lay her fingers onto the remote it abruptly shot across to the other side of the table and out of reach. Marie's fears had now been confirmed.

It was back again and this time, Marie was on her own. As she glanced over across the lounge she watched as her mother's rocking chair moved backwards and forwards as if something was sitting in it. Marie screamed out in sheer terror and made a dash for safety behind the settee. She sat there petrified curled up awaiting an attack. Then the lights started to flicker on and off. Marie shouted 'Stop!', and at that... all hell broke loose. Suddenly items started flying about the room. Ornaments shot off the shelves and mantle which flew across at her and came crashing to the floor. Marie forced herself to run for the phone. She grabbed it and shot back behind the settee. She telephone Susan screaming and crying down the phone. Now larger items such as furniture was starting to move. Marie watched as the rocking chair tipped onto its side and slammed itself into the lounge wall. 'The furniture is moving, everything's going mad' she screamed down the phone. Susan could clearly hear banging and smashing sounds in the background. 'Where's Jamie?' asked Susan. 'She's out, she went to the shop' screamed Marie.

Susan now distraught shouted to Marie 'Get out of the house, just go, I'm on my way', but just as she said it, the settee which Marie was hiding behind suddenly shot up on its side and flung itself against the front door blocking Marie's escape. 'It was as if this 'thing' knew what I was thinking' said Marie. Then just as she thought things couldn't get any worse, all the lights in the house went out. Marie was terrified. She remembered that her digital camera was on the coffee table. She was desperate to generate some kind of light even if it was just the flash from her camera. She reached out into the darkness hoping not to come in contact with this 'thing'. Images of the footprints they found in the kitchen flooded her mind. Eventually she reached the coffee table and ran her hands over it. She felt the camera in her grasp and shot back across the room and huddled in the corner as if some kind of innate primal instinct had taken over. She raised the camera, taking photos around the lounge. She could now see that the whole room was wrecked. Suddenly she heard Jamie's voice. She had arrived back from the shop and was unable to get through the front door as it was now blocked by a large two seater settee. At that very point the lights came back on. Marie screamed out again 'Jamie... I'm in here'. Jamie instantly knew something was wrong and pushed hard at the door again and again. Eventually she was able to push the settee aside. She was horrified at the sight of destruction and a traumatised Marie who immediately ran over and placed her arms around Jamie... From then on, Jamie swore never to leave Marie alone again.

That was the day that Matt had finally realised that this 'thing' could attack his daughter and that it was very real. The following morning, as Susan and the girls were cleaning up after the events that had unfolded the night before, Matt, stern faced walked over to the directory and started looking through it. He had decided to try and get help from a local Pastor. Most of them just said that they didn't deal with that sort of thing and couldn't help. Eventually he managed to convince someone to visit the house. A Pastor from a near by church visited that evening along with a colleague. 'It was difficult to talk about this, you put yourself up for criticism, disbelief and skepticism. House was still a wreck, but we wanted the Pastor to see how we were living' said Susan. She finally felt some relief that help was at hand. The Pastor conducted a blessing in each and every room of the house and asked the family to pray with him. Afterwards the Pastor took Susan aside and said 'This is bad... there's spiritual warfare going on here'. As the Pastor was leaving Jamie asked 'Is there any more you can do?' The Pastor looked over at Jamie and said 'We can't help you', and that was that. He just left. Susan and the girls felt abandoned and left out to dry. It was now clear... They were on their own!

Photographs taken by Marie in the darkened lounge...

That night, the disturbances started up again. Clearly the Pastor's visit had no affect. As time went on the incidents continued. Susan thought that the only way out of this was to move. It seemed the only choice she had. But Susan couldn't afford to. Her and Matt were already behind on payments and she was struggling at work due to stress and sleep deprivation. None of them could even afford to stay at a hotel and they had no close friends or family local to them. They had all moved hundreds of miles away from their families to California believing this new start to be beneficial. How wrong they had been.

Susan felt her family breaking down. She and Matt would constantly argue and fall out. The girls started to lock themselves away in their bedrooms. Especially Jamie who had somehow found comfort in her solitude. She considered her bedroom to be some kind of sanctuary. Susan said 'We even tried not to talk about it, as it often caused the disturbances to increase'. Susan eventually just stopped communicating with Matt and he started staying away from home more regularly. It had become routine for the family to get up in the morning, grab a cup of coffee and then start cleaning up the mess. Jamie was suffering from sleepless nights and had lost her appetite. She became withdrawn and lethargic. She was living in constant fear. She had come to spending most nights in her bedroom. She thought her room was acted as some type of barrier. That she would be safe. She was wrong!...

A couple of nights later Susan had gone to pick up Marie from her friends house and had left Jamie alone in her bedroom. That's when it started again. Jamie was sat on her bed when an almighty thump hit her bedroom door. Jamie jumped up. Realising she was on her own she grabbed her pillow and sat in the corner of her room. Then again, another bang, then another. After almost an hour of something pounding at her bedroom door, Jamie finally took a step forward. She had had enough. She slowly reached out at the door knob but, just as she was about to touch it, the pounding stopped. It was clearly playing games with her. As she backed away, the pounding started again.

Terrified she decided to wait it out. The pounding continued for almost 2 hours 'solid'. Eventually, Jamie now angered stormed towards her bedroom door and flung it open... As she looked around she Poltergeists.

Photographic anomalies are plentiful these days, due to a huge influx of available and easily assessable cameras. Light anomalies have always fascinated me. It is true that professionals who deal with the subject of photography can always recreate similar photos, yet the question is... Are people faking and creating such images just because professionals can recreate them, or are there other explanations? As normal throughout the subject of the paranormal, there seems to be a divide of opinions in regards the authenticity of such photographs.

Poltergeists.

We're right to be terrified, say physicists. Children generate poltergeist activity by channelling energy into the quantum mechanical vacuum.

Pierro Brovetto, whose last known address was the Istituto Fisica Superiore, in Cagliari, Italy and his colleague Vera Maxia wanted to explain the origin of poltergeist phenomena, characterised by objects flying around the room "of their own accord".

The researchers note that poltergeist encounters have been reported around the world and across different cultures, but tend to have one thing in common.

"Poltergeist disturbances often occur in the neighbourhood of a pubescent child or a young woman," the authors note in their paper.

So Brovetto and Maxia have come up with a mechanism to explain just how these women and children create such havoc. Like so many problems that arise in adolescence, puberty gets the blame.

"Puberty is a modification of the child body which involves various organs, chiefly the brain," they state.

I agree with some of the information provided by Brovetto and Maxia. However I believe they may need to further study relative cases throughout the world as there is evidence of diversity within the disturbances during poltergeist infestations. Not always are females involved and not always are they associated directly with family members being in close proximity...

could see pans, pots, cups, even a hammer lying on the floor in the hallway. This 'thing' had utilised anything could lay its hands on to throw at Jamie's door. As she turned to go back into her bedroom she noticed a large crater type hole on the outside of the door. 'It looked as if it had been hit by a battering ram and my door knob was bent' Jamie said. This scared Jamie. It wasn't just a noise. Something was physically bashing hell out of her door. She rushed back into her bedroom locking the door behind her. She had never been so scared.

Then suddenly the light from inside the on-sweet bathroom started to flicker on and off. Jamie could hear movement coming from in there. It was now in her bathroom. Jamie screaming and crying believed it was coming for her. Then the bathroom door creaked open just an inch. The lock and door knob on her bathroom door was missing. Matt had taken it off a few months back after Jamie had got mysteriously locked in the bathroom. All that was there now, was a hole where the door knob use to be. Overwhelmed with fear and the thought that this 'thing' was coming for her, she rushed over to her draws and got out some kite string. She reluctantly crept over to the bathroom door and slowly placed the string through the hole and grabbed it pulling it back tight. She sat in the corner of her bedroom, the bathroom door pulled closed by the taught string. Just as she was calming herself she suddenly felt a tug on the string. 'Oh my God... go away!' she screamed out. The tugging got harder, it was trying to open the bathroom door. Jamie held on tight even though the string was now cutting into her fingers. Jamie was determined not to let go and at that thought, the string suddenly snapped. She sat there eyes fixed on her bathroom door as it slowly opened. Fearing she would see something from her nightmares she closed her eyes tight...

Then a quietness fell over the house... Jamie opened her eyes. There was nothing there. She walked over to find a pair of nail scissors sat on the bathroom floor. She examined the end of the string... She couldn't believe it. This 'thing' had cut the string! Again fear took over and she decided to flee the house. She rushed over and opened her bedroom door and was greeted with a role of tissue, now burning in the middle of the pan which was on the hallway floor. As she looked about she could see that tissue had been draped all over. It had moved beyond anything it had done before. Jamie ran to the bathroom and soaked a towel in water and threw it over the pan, but, by now other pieces of tissue had caught fire. She frantically ran around putting out the fires. Was determined to save the house from going up in flames. The tissue was wrapped around all the things that could catch fire. She grabbed at the tissue tearing it down from around the hallway curtains. It was as if this thing was setting it up. 'Setting up the tissue to carry a flame around the house' said Jamie. She eventually got the flames out and was exhausted...

Jamie was found in the lounge shaking and crying when Susan arrived. 'She was a total wreck. We just had to get out. This 'thing' attempted to burn my house down, with my daughter in it. That was the last straw, Susan stated. The family were forced to flee their home. A wedge had now been driven between Susan and Matt. They were separating. The bond between Jamie and Marie remained. Susan and Matt never got back together. Susan and Jamie moved back to stay with Susan's mother. Three months later, the neighbours next door to Susan's house just up and left; and since, four other neighbours have left their homes.

I'm unsure as to the reason behind them all moving, maybe due to financial difficulties, lack of work in the area... Who knows? Susan stated.

Susan and Matt's house was never sold and Susan went bankrupt, but... she was happy. Happy at the thought of never seeing that house again...

Note: I have become rather critical throughout the years and rarely do I believe everything I'm told. Normally, through investigation and research, I have found many a rational explanation. Witnesses that Believe in such phenomena is never a good thing. It muddies the waters you could say; nor knowledge of the subject and the expectation of something happening. In many cases, removing the focus from an environment can result in the cease of disturbances. However, it has been noted that such disturbances are not house centered and more people centered you could say. Sometimes it has been reported that disturbances can follow the focus from place to place. If that's the case, its not always a good idea to run from the problem. Maybe facing this thing head on is a better approach. Psychology teaches us that the primal emotion of fear can cause people to see or even feel things that are not really there or happening.. Proprioceptors can wrongly interpret our actions and environment thus cause the sensation of being touched, or even causing you to believe you have seen something moving out of the corner of your eye. There is nothing more demonstrative and sometimes referred to as vampiric than the phenomena associated with poltergeists. Often thought to be capable of object manipulation like stacking, arranging and as Susan Lewis and her family discovered destructiveness.

As in many cases of said poltergeist infestations there seems to be very little evidence. It wouldn't be the first time families have faked such incidents in hope of being re-housed my council or private landlords. However, in Susan Lewis's case, which has been well documented, this does not seem to be evident.

Clearly the family were distraught and Susan did stand considerable financial loss not to mention her dissolve of her marriage. Witness reports and the submission of several interesting photographs supplied by the family help build credibility. For me... I have no reason to doubt Susan Lewis and her family. Clearly something traumatic had taken place in their lives. Something they are reluctant to talk about or witness ever again...

THE ALIEN AUTOPSY

...OH NO! NOT AGAIN.

In most UFO circles the Alien Autopsy is a subject of derision, it's that silly hoax story Ant and Dec made that film about. But stay with me while I flog this dead horse just one more time and in the process I hope to stir your interest just enough to get you thinking that there really is more to this old tired hoax story than meets the eye...

We all think we know the AA story, but which one do you know?. Ray Santilli's "official" story (which he still sticks to [mostly] by the way) of being approached by an old time movie guy who once worked for the military?. Or the latest "Hoax" story given by Spyros Melaris, and examined in great detail in Philip Mantle's recent book "Alien Autopsy Casebook The Full Facts Finally Revealed"?, variations of which Spyros had expounded repeatedly to myself and others in extended email exchanges from 2007 through to the present day.

But there is another story you probably haven't heard about which the same Spyros Melaris related in a taped interview made just a few years before he made his current claims, a story which in many ways is at complete odds with the detailed "hoax" claims Spyros now makes. I'll not go into just who Spyros Melaris is or how he became entangled with the AA film he does a far better job of explaining it all in the interview a transcription of which can be found at the link below.

<http://voyagemedia.ath.cx/AA-Forum/sm-interview.txt>

Ray Santilli publicly still sticks by his story that the original film he obtained was the genuine article but as Ray released the above taped interview to us in which Spyros outlines his scheme, I think even Ray has now conceded the film we see today is not all what it says it is on the tin, he now likes to describe it as a "reconstruction".

So lets be up front about this, 'IS' the film a fake?, well I believe it is... "mostly".

Mostly?...Yes, mostly it's a fake, but even this fake is not all it seems, and in the end if you stick with this story, you'll see it has an even bigger twist in the tail.

If you've downloaded the tape interview transcript and read through it carefully you will have seen at least two (and more) quite earth shattering statements by Spyros who now claims that he produced and created "the whole thing".

In the interview he states: "In the twenty-two minute film we released there are elements of the film that are real." and "We actually kept original footage in the film we used."

Spyros is here admitting and confirming that there WAS some original AA footage which he used to base his

"reconstruction" on and not only that, some of these original usable clips were eventually edited into and used in the finished film. Original footage gets other mentions too, Spyros recalls showing the finished footage to Ray and Ray's inability to see the joins between the "original" and "reconstructed" footage. These are not the only references to "original" footage by those involved, here's a quote from John Humphreys, the sculptor and artist who created the "creature" on the autopsy table, on his official website it states:

"In 1995, John sculpted the 'Roswell Alien' which was based on fragments of degraded film footage from an alien autopsy shot in 1947. He also created the special effects and played the part of the pathologist in the film. In 2004 he re-created the Alien and reprised his role as the pathologist once again, this time for the Ant and Dec movie 'Alien Autopsy'."

Note the quote..

"which was based on fragments of degraded film footage from an alien autopsy shot in 1947" So here we have two individuals intimately connected with the "hoax" both claiming that there was original footage at some stage AND in Spyros's case saying some of it IS STILL THERE in the footage we see today. What interested me was IF fragments of original footage were still there in the AA footage was it possible to spot any of them? I believe I can demonstrate that in some cases they can.

Before we examine the evidence we need to know some of the background information Spyros gave us regarding how he filmed and produced "his" footage. His claim to us was that he shot the two autopsies and the "Debris Footage" over an extended weekend in early 1995 using a set constructed as "two walls and a flat", he supplied this image to us to illustrate this.

He also claims only two "bodies" were supplied by John Humphries, one was used to shoot the first autopsy, this footage Spyros claims contained errors and has never been released publicly, the other "body" was used for the second autopsy ie, the footage finally released by Ray. So a simple set of two fixed walls and a movable flat dummy wall and only one "body" were used in each autopsy's production.

He also claims his footage was shot on 16mm B+W film and once shooting was completed all the processed film was transferred via Telecine to video and edited and "aged" by computer, once this was complete the finished production was transferred back to video. Spyros correctly specified the 1990's commercial editing package he claims to have used and it was indeed capable of this process. All the original 16mm film shot by Spyros and the completed video version on Betacam SP Video were handed over to Ray Santilli.

Interestingly, although Philip Mantle now takes a completely negative stance where the AA footage is concerned, he did actually track down the film technician who made the 16mm film to video transfer of the footage, the technician was reported to have made the comment that although the majority of the film was in good condition some of it was in a poor state. One has to ask why would some sections of newly shot film be in a poor state?, though sections of old film mixed in with new footage might prompt this comment.

The footage consists of two distinct sections, "the autopsy" itself and "the debris footage", Ray originally made "The Footage" publicly available on a limited edition VHS tape where the video was captioned and split into "reel" segments allegedly referring to the numbering found on the "original film cans". There were also some badly damaged

On a lighter note:

Humouristic reconstruction of the 1995 scandal when two British lads were accused of having faked a documentary from the Roswell incident in 1947.

Interesting and amusing movie, however, many still believe that the original footage was not created by amateurs using items of meat purchased from Smithfield Market in Manchester UK. The footage does seem to be a very good hoax which may have required some expertise, time and expense. The footage remains debatable as to who was really behind the hoax and more importantly... Why!

The Footage

On the 28th of August 1995, ten million TV viewers in the US watched for the first time pathologists carefully dissect what appeared to be an extraterrestrial life form. In a series of grainy black-and-white film segments, the Fox Network documentary, Alien Autopsy: Fact Or Fiction, showed what was claimed to be archive footage from 1947. London-based film producer Ray Santilli had bought the autopsy footage for £100,000, while researching material for a music documentary in Cleveland Ohio, in the summer of 1993.

After successfully arranging a cash deal to buy some rare Elvis Presley footage, the cameraman offered Santilli some 'valuable footage' taken during his time in the forces. The film was alleged to show a UFO crash site and an alien autopsy. After viewing the film, Santilli was able to raise enough cash to buy the film in November, 1994.

When he returned to London, Santilli took the film to the British UFO Research Association (BUFORA), Where Director of Research, Philip Mantle stated, 'The footage is unique. It is the only known instance of aliens on film'. In a press release on 26th March, 1995, Mantle claimed that 'we have had the film checked by Kodak who confirm it is 50 years old... we now plan to have it examined by film experts at Sheffield'.

The rest is history...

frames of film edited into this version of the footage which I refer to as "the fragments", these do not appear in any other released version of the footage as far as I'm aware.

All versions of the footage have only been seen in video format, no "film" version has ever been publicly shown, but if Spyros's story of editing and manipulating the footage by computer and outputting the finished product back to video format is true this is understandable. Some of the "fogged" sections of the footage do show 16mm film stock markings (though these are from modern Kodak film) and "the fragments" seem to be from safety print stock and although they do not show scenes from either the autopsy or the debris sections, they can be associated with the autopsy footage as I will show later.

Those familiar with the story may recall that way back in 1995 Philip Mantle in his role as a director of BUFORA offered their services to Ray Santilli and in exchange Ray presented BUFORA with a Betacam SP tape containing "all the usable footage". Via Philip during 2005 I had the extended loan of this tape, which I was finally able to have duplicated and a working copy made. I then transferred the recordings digitally on to my computer so the footage could be studied frame by frame in detail at leisure. It must be noted that the Betacam tape provided significantly better quality images for study than those I had previously digitised from Ray's "Footage" VHS tape as can be seen below.

After reading the interview transcript it was to these capture files I turned to see if there was any evidence at all in the footage that might indicate it could have been edited together from more than the one single source as was now being claimed in the Spyros interview tape.

I began a frame by frame examination of the footage with the scenario in mind as laid out in the taped interview, that so little of any "original" footage had survived by the time that Ray had finally recovered the films back to the UK and he had by that time, numerous contractual obligations to produce "the goods", the only way out was to run with Spyros's offer to "recreate" the lost sections of film and hope enough final usable footage could be cobbled together to satisfy his customers. Stills taken from surviving sections of footage would provide Spyros with "key frames" around which he could "storyboard" his filming and also provide enough detail to build the autopsy set and also give John Humphreys a design to which he could build his creature bodies.

It sounds like a totally bazaar and audacious scheme, some would say only a magician would be able to pull it off, but we must remember as well as being in the video/tv industry Spyros IS a "magician" and was a member of the Magic Circle for many years ...that is until he was expelled.

I have to say I had grave doubts of finding any evidence as I had been looking at the footage myself off and on over the years since 1995, but like everyone else we had been looking with eyes that assumed as we had been told, that the footage was a single procedure all shot at the same time in the same place, the idea that the footage might consist of a mix of old and new film carefully edited together had certainly never cross my mind. Surprisingly once looking for any subtle differences indicating more than the one set of source material I didn't have to look too far to find them, and I rapidly came to the shocking conclusion that the footage was a hybrid, cleverly edited together from a number, possibly up to 3, different autopsies.

But Spyros said he only filmed the one autopsy for the footage Ray released?

So far I have identified at least 10 clips of what might be termed "other footage", on the whole these are very short sections of film, from just a few frames up to a few seconds of footage intercut with what I assume is the modern "recreation" footage filmed by Spyros, this modern footage seems to make up the main bulk (80-90%) of the AA film, this would seem to tally with Spyros's comments in the interview that there were around 2 minutes of "original" footage out of the 19-20 minutes of the final released footage.

A few of the more easily seen "other/original footage" segments I'd now like to illustrate.

There are too many feet. Spyros maintains that in the filming of the 2nd autopsy, the footage we are now examining, he only used the one "body" as created by John Humphreys, and that the same "set" was used throughout the filming. Why then can we find two different sets of feet on "the body"? Please examine closely the image below and pay particular attention to the length of the big toe on each foot, in one image it is longer than the next toe and in the other image it's shorter?, it can also be seen that some of the lengths of the other toes differ between the feet in the two clips of film.

The above clips occur early into the autopsy section where the "pathologist" is seen examining the body, the foot with the long big toe is only seen in this one short segment of film from where frame 6725 was captured, it is not seen anywhere else in the footage, but it's still one pair of feet too many. Spyros claims he only used the one "body" for his film but the final footage has two pairs of feet?. Could the clip with the "long toe" be one of our salvaged "original footage" clips?. I think it's a very good candidate.

And too many Ears. Not only do we have too many feet but we also have too many ears!, three sets in all, but below I'll just illustrate the two easiest to spot. Throughout the majority of the film the "body" is seen with what I term the "pointy" ears, as the ear shape seems to have a sharp point to it, almost demonic!.

But in some sections where the head is being worked on another rounder shape of ear is glimpsed as I now show in the image below. You can also see in the second image that although the blood traces do look similar they are far from an exact match as can be judged from their spacing ratios as illustrated. Spyros claims he only used the one "body", therefore it's ears should not morph from "pointy" to "rounded" and the blood traces should remain fixed. I think here again in this short "round eared" clip we have a good candidate for title of "original" footage.

In-consistant Blood Stains. Again in the section of the autopsy dealing with the head in which we found the morphing ears we can also spot blood marks on the autopsy table changing from one shot to the next, see the blood stains in the image below, the images are taken from just a few hundred frames apart yet it's impossible to find a matching pattern of stains the implication being we are looking at two different autopsies edited to appear to be the same procedure.

Also too many walls. Spyros is most specific in his description of his set, he even provides us with a diagram showing exactly how it was laid out, he used just 2 fixed walls in an "L" shaped arrangement, wall(1) with the observation window and wall(2) with the clock. An interesting point with some of the footage is that in it you get glimpses of the room's other walls 3 and 4 that Spyros DIDN'T build for his set. Yes, it can be argued that wall(3) opposite to the "window" wall(1) could have been provided with the "flat" dummy wall he says he also had but as wall 3 is seen in the "long toe" clip it's probably an "original" wall. There is evidence in the film itself that wall(4), opposite the "clock" wall(2), contains a doorway, a feature not provided by the "flat" and in no way provided for in Spyros's set. In that doorway in the footage, part of a "bio-suited" figure can be made out.

Spotting background objects in the footage is difficult in still images, they are far easier to "see" in the moving film but below are a couple of examples showing "wall 4" and the "suited leg" of the doorway figure.

And there's more... It's interesting that evidence has surfaced within the footage to say that wall 4 contained a doorway, as some time ago soon after the appearance of the AA footage Ray provided a very damaged fragment of film, allegedly from the footage for American photo expert Bob Shell to try and authenticate with the help of people he knew at Kodak.

As can be seen in the image there is very little in this clip other than "a doorway" into a room, and seemingly nothing that ties it to the autopsy itself, it's also safety print film and not camera original film so there is nothing to indicate when the original negative from which the print was made was taken. Other than confirming the clip was old and on Triacate base stock as used from the mid 1930's through to the mid 1950's there was little Bob could do with it.

Some time later I was flipping through the frames of the original 1995 VHS footage tape and ran through the "fragments" and was struck by the fact some of the fragments were very similar to the images seen in Bob's film fragment, after a little examination it became clear they were from the same section of film and more of the room and it's contents could be seen through the doorway in the "fragments". After digitising the frames as individual images and manipulating and overlaying them a far fuller glimpse of the room could be seen...

Beyond the doorway there is what could be the autopsy table covered with a sheet but of most interest, if you look very closely at the full composite image, at the very top of the frame you can see what Roswell Incident.

"The Roswell Incident," as it is known, is described in several controversial books, including one of that title by Charles Berlitz and William L. Moore. Reportedly, in early July 1947, a flying saucer crashed on the ranch property of William Brazel near Roswell, New Mexico, and was subsequently retrieved by the United States government (Berlitz and Moore 1980). Over the years, numerous rumors, urban legends, and outright hoaxes have claimed that saucer wreckage and the remains of its humanoid occupants were stored at a secret facility — e.g., a (nonexistent) "Hangar 18" at Wright Patterson Air Force Base — and that the small corpses were autopsied at that or another site (Berlitz and Moore 1980; Stringfield 1977).

Special Thanks to Joe Nickell.

The Footage.

Interestingly, the film failed to agree with earlier purported eyewitness testimony about the alleged autopsy. For example, multiple medical informants described the Roswell creatures as lacking ears and having only four fingers with no thumb (Berlitz and Moore 1980), whereas the autopsy film depicts a creature with small ears and five fingers in addition to a thumb. Ergo, either the previous informants are hoaxers, or the film is a hoax, or both.

appear to be two metal bowls covered with either what could be an instrument tray or a clip board resting on top of them, the bowls in particular seem to be of a type very similar to those seen in the autopsy footage, an enlargement of this section of the composit "fragments" image is shown in enlargement below.

The Debris Footage. Anomalous clips do not only appear in the autopsy section, they can also be found in the short debris section of the AA footage, in fact this section of the film holds some key elements as I hope to demonstrate later. Firstly though study the image below:

I think anyone who has a vague interest in the Alien Autopsy film will recognise this image of the military figure holding the two "alien" panels. It may come as a great surprise but this image does NOT appear in any version of the footage. When I queried this point with Ray Sattilli sometime in the year 2000 he was quite open and explained that the image came from a badly damaged piece of the film they couldn't use but an image from it was copied onto a "slide" for use as a publicity still. So Ray tells us that this image is also from "original" footage, can we prove it?, the answer is fascinating and possibly holds the key to the authenticity of any "original" footage.

There are three main points to observe in the "panels" still, the label on the right hand panel, the tent pole to the left of the figure and the "I" beam debris on the table to the lower left of the figure, I'll go through and examine these one by one.

The Label. All be it the "panels" frame doesn't itself appear in the footage it's contents may/should if we assume the "recreation" scenario, so can we track the contents and confirm this?. Take the panels, they don't seem to have any unique features but that label I asked you to note does have a very unique feature near it's center, it has a prominent dark mark. Dark marks appear on many of the labels and seem to be created by the use of the "#" character on the labels, where the numbering can be read it's usually in the form "# W <number>" with the "#" at the string end of the label, but significantly not in the case of the "panels" image label.

that I finally found a very short clip with the correct "panel" image label layout:

As this correct label quickly "morphs" into the wrong label in the next clip, I suggest we have here another candidate for "original" footage.

To confirm it's the same label study the following image, the label seen in the clip has been enlarged and rotated then placed side by side with the label from the "panels" image, I think the pattern match between the two is a good one.

AA Footage

Panel Image

The Tent Pole. If you take notice of the background in the debris footage and the tent pole between the tables, throughout most of the debris footage there is a nice period piece of "set dressing", a Gas Mask can be spotted hanging from the pole.

At first I totally failed to spot this unique label in any of the debris footage, in fact the label on that panel when it can be seen in the footage looks like as it's seen in fig14.

Frame from AA debris footage showing the "panel" image label

Regrettably this could be one piece of set dressing too far, as there is actually NO gas mask present in the "panels" image as can be confirmed below in the enhanced section of the "panels" image fig-18. (Above).

I suggest any clip in the debris footage with the gas mask visible should be considered modern "recreation" footage.

The "I" beam.

This is the key to the whole business but that's for later, firstly lets examine the "I" beam on the table as it's seen in the majority of the footage, here's a close-up of the beam seen on the table with it's prominent "glyphs":

But now take a close look at the "I" beam on the table in the "panels" image, do you see anything?

The answer to that question is "no", but you should. Although you can quite clearly see the "I" beam's vertical web in the "panels" image those very prominent "glyphs" ARE MISSING, and you can enhance the image until Photoshop is blue in the face you will not find those glyphs, they are not there. But what you will find are these...

And unlike the raised glyphs seen throughout the debris footage these symbols appear to be dark features on the surface of the "I" beam's web itself. We now come to the strangest twist of all in the AA saga, none of this evidence so far can verify that any old "original" film Ray Santilli may or may not have recovered was genuine, there seems to be no item or "hook" in any of the images to tie down the footage to a historical time or date or person...well that's actually not quite true, and here we meet our twist in the tail. My phone call to Ray Santilli back in the year 2000 asking for background information about the "panels" image had nothing really to do with the AA footage at all but rather my main target of research since 1998, the "Fort Worth - Roswell" photographs taken in 1947 by James Bond Johnson. By chance I had been looking at an enlargement of the "panels" image and as I looked over the image something in the picture, on the "I" beam had stopped me dead in my tracks. Tucked away on that beam was the vague outline of a symbol I had only just been looking at in a photograph of the debris sitting on the floor of Gen Roger Ramey's office on the afternoon of July 8th 1947?, a very striking symbol, and one the earliest we found, we call it the "back to back J".

The harder I looked the plainer it became, the symbol really was sitting there on the beam in what was alleged to be a "hoaxed" film. In the intervening years since 2000 I've been able to match a total of 4 identifiable symbols on the AA "panel" "I" beam with some of the symbols found within the Fort Worth photographs, I also think it seems more than coincidental that two of the same symbols are found together and in the same sequence in both the "panels" image and on the Fort Worth debris. I present this evidence below, the inserted images around the lower enhanced beam image are all from the FW debris photographs taken in 1947.

Is this the "hook" linking any "original" AA footage fragments with the past? As I said earlier the "panels" image is the key, via the "dark mark" label we can positively link the image with the "Debris Footage" as the label appears in an isolated clip in the footage. But the "I" beam symbols seen in the image link the image and therefore the clip to a known historical event, the symbols on the debris match the symbols seen in the debris on the floor of Gen Roger Ramey on July 8th 1947, some of the debris collected by Maj Jesse Marcel out at the Foster Ranch 60 mls northwest of Roswell New Mexico.

The Fort Worth photographs are verifiable historical documents, they were taken on the afternoon of July 8th 1947 and the surviving negatives still in their original storage sleeves reside in the Special Collections Section of the University of Texas Library at Arlington TX, anything seen in those images was definitely there in Fort Worth in 1947 and this includes the symbols.

The Betacam tape of the AA footage I've used in my research was handed over to Philip Mantle in 1995 and has remained out of Ray Santilli's reach since that date. The AA "panels" image was also released as a publicity still at this time in 1995.

The "symbols" found in the Fort Worth photographs were first discovered by the then newly formed RPIT team and myself in 1998/99, three years after the AA film Betacam was produced. I believe no one up until that date had seen or

The Footage.

CSICOP staffers (Executive Director Barry Karr, Skeptical Inquirer Assistant Editor Tom Genoni, Jr., and I) monitored developments in the case. Before the film aired, CSICOP issued a press release, briefly summarizing the evidence against authenticity and quoting CSICOP Chairman Paul Kurtz as stating:

"The Roswell myth should be permitted to die a deserved death. Whether or not we are alone in the universe will have to be decided on the basis of better evidence than that provided by the latest bit of Roswell fakery. Television executives have a responsibility not to confuse programs designed for entertainment with news documentaries".

Special Thanks to Joe Nickell.

Conclusion.

*There has been so much information and probable disinformation not only about the Roswell Incident but also the Alien Autopsy Footage that it has become next to impossible to reach a definite conclusion. One thing is for sure, the Incident and Footage will continue to be a mystery that will spark debates for many years to come...

commented on symbols within the FW images.

If you can now accept that at the very least 1 "anomalous" clip in the AA "debris" footage can be positively linked to the "panel" image and this in turn can be linked via the symbols to the Fort Worth photographs we must seriously consider that the other "anomalous" clips lurking in the AA footage and around which Spyros "recreated" his film may very well be from this same source, and if that is the case, shown below may well be an occupant of whatever came down in those series of events that took place across New Mexico during the spring and summer of 1947.

The image to the left is from an AA clip I've flagged up (for more than one reason) as probable "original" footage.

We know better quality versions of the telecined footage existed at one time, Spyros has provided some stills from this "pre-processed" footage, it would be fascinating to have access to this if it still exists, it would be even more fascinating to have access to those "original" 16mm film clips if Ray still has ownership of them...

Paranormal North East
Ghost Stories by Darren W Ritson
(Forward by Dave Wood, chairman of ASSAP)

BOOK REVIEW

I am very interested in ghost stories and the paranormal. I found Darren W Ritson, s book an enjoyable read, not being from the north east I found the stories new to me. The book contains ghost stories from a vast and wide variety of venues in and around the north east of England, from Roman burial grounds, castle Keeps, Bomber cockpits and much more. Each story is assigned its own chapter and together with the story told and relevant photographs also incorporated into each story is the group's method of paranormal investigation that took place. I found this an interesting addition to the usual "ghost story" books available.

This would be an interesting book for those who enjoy ghost stories and the paranormal; with this book you get an insight to both areas.

Important Notice

Re: www.whitehouse.gov/petitions

Throughout December the White House "We the People" website experienced significant technical difficulties. Many thousands of people had problems creating an account and/or logging in and/or signing a petition. PRG received scores of emails from angry and frustrated potential petition signers. Furthermore, the "We the People" section was frequently down for maintenance. Consequently, all petitions submitted in December had little chance of reaching the 25,000 signature threshold within 30 days for a formal response - Disclosure Petition II included. PRG has confirmed these problems with a White House staffer and has been told they are being fixed.

Therefore, "Disclosure Petition II - the Rockefeller Initiative" will be resubmitted to "We the People" sometime in January accompanied by a considerable amount of media and web promotion. [Note: the resubmitted petition will have a new direct link.] This petition is specifically formulated to challenge the White House formal statement of November 4, 2011 that, "The U.S. government has no evidence that any life exists outside our planet, or that an extraterrestrial presence has contacted or engaged any member of the human race. In addition, there is no credible information to suggest that any evidence is being hidden from the public's eye."

Disclosure Petition I and the White House response generated more media coverage worldwide than all other posted petitions combined. The political media have taken notice. Should the resubmitted Disclosure Petition II quickly acquire the needed 25,000 signatures, the impact on the Disclosure process could be dramatic. But this depends upon you.

If you already have an account open at "We the People," get ready to sign Disclosure Petition II in early January. If you do not yet have an account, go to www.whitehouse.gov/petitions and create one now. Anyone from any nation can open an account and sign petitions. The current submission of Disclosure Petition II (link below) will remain active through December 31. Feel free to sign it for practice.

The night sky - January 2012

Mercury will be visible low in the east for about 1 hour before sunrise – but take care to observe it before the Sun does rise. Venus will be an evening object – visible in the west for about 2 hours after sunset. Mars is rising now before midnight and is a morning object. Jupiter is still visible until around 1am. Saturn is getting easier to see in the morning sky.

The Stars at 8pm GMT

North – Cassiopeia is near the zenith with Cepheus. Cygnus is well placed in the north-west and the two bears are in the north-east.

East – Perseus is almost overhead with Auriga and Gemini well placed for viewing. Orion is becoming easier to see in the early part of the evening. Taurus is well placed for viewing.

South – Perseus is overhead with Aries well placed for viewing. On the 1st of the month the crescent moon is close to Jupiter in the constellation of Pisces – the fishes. Andromeda and Pegasus are well placed in the south west.

West – Cygnus is getting lower in the sky.

Meteor Showers

The main meteor shower of January is the Quadrantids. The constellation of Muralis Quadrans was dissolved many years ago and now forms part of Bootes the Herdsman. The shower takes place in the early hours of January 3rd or 4th.

In 2012 the Moon sets at around 0345 and so there will be a window of about 2 to 3 hours of viewing opportunity before the sun rises at 0823. Sometimes this shower can be very rich with bright colourful meteor trails.

Comets

There may be two comets in the sky:

C/2009 P1 Garradd [in Hercules] and P/2006 T1 Levy [in Pisces] both comets will be around 7th magnitude so visible in binoculars.

BOOK REVIEW

Celebrated spectre inspector Bunty Austin returns to her favourite stomping ground, the Isle of Anglesey, to explore those ghostly sightings deemed too terrifying for inclusion in previous volume Anglesey Ghosts. Some names have been changed to protect the reputation of Bunty's terrified fellow Islanders, but otherwise everything in More Anglesey Ghosts has been vouched for by those unlucky enough to witness these disturbing events. If you dare to trouble these pages, you will discover the secret of the poltergeist of Bryngwran and learn the terrible truth about Old Jessie of Parco. Rosina the opera singer returns to trouble the staff of Wylfa Power Station, and the frantic letter-writing spirit of Llanfair Caer Einion keeps his roommate up all night. And then there are the small matters of the Roman legionary who stalks the ruins of Din Lligwy, and the malevolent eyeless ghost of Llangefui. Of course, not all ghosts are human. Bunty Austin also has news of several spooky dogs, a sheep and a monkey one of which stands sentinel outside her own home. She also visits Tre-Ysgawen Hall, probably the most haunted building in Anglesey, and uses a ghostly sighting in Amlwch as an opportunity to solve a nineteenth-century murder. Read on... but only if you have the fortitude for handling Anglesey's gruesome night terrors.

Well... What can I say? ... I just can't get enough of these books. Bunty does a great job describing the many strange and paranormal incidents throughout Anglesey Wales. For me... there is certainly a personal interest as I have conducted several investigations throughout the small Isle of Anglesey and you cannot help being drawn in to the Isles beauty, legends, myths and tales. I equally enjoyed this book as much as the first and was sad that I had reached the back cover within a couple of days. An amazing book, well worth reading and even possibly visiting some of Anglesey's haunted locations... Available at Amazon.

'It was something pretty sizeable'. Angus councillor reports big cat sighting.

Donald Morrison with his black labradors Cuilan and Holly. Below: the dense Montreatmont Forest. Could it be the home of a big cat?

A councillor says he could be the latest person to have witnessed a big cat roaming in Angus. Donald Morrison was on his way into Montreatmont Forest, between his home near Letham and Brechin, when a black creature he is sure was a big cat crossed his path around 10am on November 27th. Mr Morrison was on his way to walk black labradors Cuilan and Holly on a regular route in the sprawling woodlands when the encounter took place. "We had just passed Red Roofs, just off the Forfar to Montrose road, and were heading into Montreatmont when it ran across the road in front of us," said the Arbroath East and Lunan SNP councillor. "I've seen very big male tom cats and I know the size of a fox having also seen them around the wood but this was just a wee bit smaller than my lab," said Mr Morrison. "When I first caught a glimpse of it, I thought it might have been another black lab. But it had a curled-down tail and definitely looked like a big cat. Maybe it could have been a big wildcat but I was only about 100 yards away and close enough to know that it was something pretty sizeable. I reckon it was bigger than a wildcat and if someone's got a domestic cat that size then it must be a super-breed. You often see deer running across the road but it wasn't chasing anything — it just ran over and disappeared into the woods."

Reports of Angus big cats have been made in the past, including some in the Montrose and Brechin areas, and Mr Morrison believes the scale of the Montreatmont Forest would give the animals plenty of cover. "It's coming to autumn so it's perfectly possible that they could be moving around," he added. A couple of years ago another Angus man reported a big cat at Rossie Braes, several miles east of Montreatmont, part of a growing catalogue of sightings. Many of those have taken place at night but Mr Morrison said the fine late summer morning had given him a clear view of the animal. "Holly will investigate things but I doubt she would have gone after that," he added.

THE Sun Flying Cloud Sparks Mystery December 30th 2011: By Vince Soodin

A SPECTACULAR white light which appears to have its own cloud has sparked a UFO mystery. A dramatic video apparently shows the unexplained phenomenon streaking rapidly across the sky. Some observers have claimed the video is fake after the film was posted on YouTube on Christmas Eve. But the mystery has deepened because footage apparently shows three SEPARATE sightings of the cloudy orb. In one film the UFO is seen against a blue sky as it hovers above a metal structure. Later it is spotted during the evening as it moves over a block of flats. Further footage shows the UFO appearing much larger just above buildings. It is the latest of many recent UFO sightings in Russia — some of which have turned out to be hoaxes. Each piece of film was shot over the town of Trekhgorny, in south-eastern Russia, by three different witnesses on December 23, according to reports.

This has led to claims that the films are not real by those who have viewed them on YouTube. One sceptical blogger noted the date the video were posted and said: "That's not a UFO, it's Santa Claus." Another joked that it was an alien whose "cloud cloaking device is not working". But another poster hoped the sighting could be real. They said: "That is very cool. Looks like something a solid craft with a protective layer of atmosphere around it. Some UFO watchers have suggested it is simply a conventional aircraft - although no explanation has been given for the surrounding cloud. Others believe it is related to a failed Russian satellite launch. Trekhgorny is located in the Chelyabinsk region near Russia's border with Kazakhstan. Its main industry is the production of nuclear reactors. The area is a UFO hot spot with numerous sightings reported each year. A 'live alien' clip, also reportedly filmed in Trekhgorny, was also posted in internet sites over Christmas..."

The Telegraph

Zombie and UFO queries are wasting police time, warns chief. A police chief has hit out at cops being forced to answer "bonkers" questions from the public - such as how many werewolves, vampires and zombies have been investigated. Chief Constable Ian Arundale is annoyed at officers being forced to spend hours answering "bizarre" queries instead of being on the beat. So far this year his officers have also logged queries about witches, ghosts, demons, wizards, Big Foot and UFOs. The rural Dyfed Powys force in Wales is legally required to spend up to 18 hours finding the information needed to answer each request.

Mr Arundale said: "We find ourselves not only dealing with the legitimate inquiries but also the bizarre which are time-consuming and take a while to deal with. We have to make 20 per cent cuts yet cannot touch a range of statutory obligations such as Freedom of Information. It is worrying that we are spending on that and not beat and service delivery." Officers throughout the force spent 240 hours this year finding the information as part of the Freedom of Information Act.

One question was if there had ever been a recorded trace of Big Foot in the Welsh countryside and how many sightings of zombies had been recorded. They have also been asked to find the star signs of car thieves and the owners of the cars they steal. Dyfed Powys Chief Constable Mr Arundale has lobbied local MP Simon Hart to press for changes in the law. Mr Hart, Tory MP for Carmarthen West and South Pembrokeshire, said: "Frivolous requests are costing a fortune and wasting police time. The Freedom of Information Act is a useful tool which I have used myself and which has undoubtedly improved the transparency and accountability of many public institutions, The Act has undoubtedly improved the way public bodies work and account for themselves, But I am concerned it is also being abused by people making vexatious, petty and sometimes downright bonkers requests. It is a worry to me that it could be turning into a bureaucratic monster that is a burden on police time and resources. It is time to be looking at introducing more stringent rules on the number, length and nature of requests allowed."

DARPA's new spy satellite could provide real-time video from anywhere on Earth.

"It sees you when you're sleeping and knows when you're awake" could be the theme song for a new spy satellite being developed by DARPA. The Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency's latest proof-of-concept project is called the Membrane Optical Imager for Real-Time Exploitation (MOIRE), and would provide real-time images and video of any place on Earth at any time — a capability that, so far, only exists in the realm of movies and science fiction. The details of this huge eye-in-the-sky look like something right out of science fiction, as well, and it would be interesting to determine if it could have applications for astronomy as well.

MOIRE would be a geosynchronous orbital system that uses a huge but lightweight membrane optic. A 20-meter-wide membrane "eye" would be etched with a diffractive pattern, according to DARPA, which would focus light on a sensor. Reportedly it will cost $500 million USD for each space-based telescope, and it would be able to image an area greater than 100 x 100 km with a video update rate of at least one frame a second. DARPA says the program aims to demonstrate the ability to manufacture large membranes and large structures to hold the optics flat, and also demonstrate the secondary optical elements needed to turn a diffraction-based optic into a wide bandwidth imaging device.

The MOIRE program began in March 2010 is now in the first phase of development, where DARPA is testing the concept's viability. Phase 2 would entail system design, with Ball Aerospace doing the design and building to test a 16-foot (5 m) telescope, and an option for a Phase 3 which would include a demonstration of the system, launching a 32-foot (10 m) telescope for flight tests in orbit.

The 20 meter (66 ft) design is quite a bit larger than NASA's next-generation James Webb Space Telescope that has an aperture of 21 feet (6.5 m). Public Intelligence reports that such a telescope should be able to spot missile launcher vehicles moving at speeds of up to 60 mph on the ground, according to a DARPA contract. That would also require the image resolution to see objects less than 10 feet (3 m) long within a single image pixel.

Ever since I wrote my very first "No Doomsday in 2012" article for Universe Today in 2008, I've been repeating the same message over and over again: The Mayans never predicted doomsday in 2012. And I'll say it once more, this time with even more expert endorsement: The Mayans never, EVER predicted doomsday in 2012. Sadly, science and history has been bent and twisted to suit supporters of this doomsday hoax, and when scientists or archaeologists go on the record to debunk the nonsense, the blame falls on some kind of convenient global conspiracy. But where did this Mayan doomsday idea come from anyway? The seed of next year's multitude of "End of the World" theories supposedly occurring on or around Dec. 21, 2012, is that a mesoamerican calendar foretold doom.

A particular Mayan calendar is at the center of all the excitement, and due to a numerical fluke, it just so happens the calendar will "run out" next year. The Mayan civilization existed from 250-900 A.D. in the current geographical location of southern Mexico, Guatemala, Belize, El Salvador and some of Honduras. Archaeologists studying this fascinating culture have been able to decipher their many calendars, but their longest period calendar -- the "Long Count" -- is what set alarm bells ringing. The Long Count calendar was created by the Mayans so that history could be chronicled and future events could be planned -- you know, not too dissimilar to the calendar on your iPhone. This long-period calendar, that has a cycle of 5,126 years, is a departure from the other calendars the Mayans used at the time. Some calendars lasted less than a year (such as the "Tzolk'in" -- that lasted 260 days), others lasted decades (such as the "Calendar Round" -- charting the approximate time span of a generation -- approximately 52 years). Then, using remarkable ingenuity, the Mayans created the Long Count calendar that had a numerical foundation -- almost like an ancient binary code.

"It's a Marketing Fallacy."

Although the exact end-date of this Long Count cycle has recently been thrown into doubt, one thing most Maya experts and doomsday theorists agree on is that the calendar "ends" next year. The calendar consists of 13 "Baktuns" -- each approximately 394-years long -- and we are coming to the end of the 13th Baktun. One thing they don't agree on, however, is what this actually means. Doomsayers will try to convince you that the "end" of the Long Count 13th Baktun is a Mayan prophesy of the "End of the World." Because, like any good snake oil salesman, you need to frighten the crap out of your audience before selling them a book on the subject. But, according to someone who actually knows a thing or two about the Maya culture, the Mayans never made any such prophesy:

"We have to be clear about this. There is no prophecy for 2012," said Erik Velasquez, an etchings specialist at the National Autonomous University of Mexico (UNAM). "It's a marketing fallacy." The National Institute of Anthropological History in Mexico, no doubt getting fed-up of their inboxes getting filled with panicked emails about fake doomsday theories, issued a statement too: "The West's messianic thinking has distorted the world view of ancient civilizations like the Mayans." According to the Institute, of the 15,000 glyphic texts found in the ancient ruins of the Mayan empire, only two mention 2012. You'd think that the "End of the World" would hold more significance, wouldn't you? Events after 2012 are also mentioned, so this "End of the World" isn't as definite as the doomsayers make out.

For some reason, modern culture embraces ancient civilizations as having magical powers -- they could somehow predict the future and had conversations with aliens (really). And for some who think the Indiana Jones movies are accurate portrayals of historic events, this probably isn't so surprising. Experts in Maya culture have a far better perspective as to what the end of the 13th Baktun really means to the descendants of the ancient Maya. "Because Bolon Yokte was already present at the day of creation ... it just seemed natural for the Mayan that Bolon Yokte will again be present," said Sven Gronemeyer, a researcher of Mayan codes from La Trobe University in Australia. Bolon Yokte is the Mayan god associated with war and creation; the reappearance of this god is therefore more of a transition from one era to the next, according to Gronemeyer. Indeed, many will be marking the end of the Mayan calendar with celebrations of spiritual "rebirth."

Mayan descendants have many celebrations planned; the countries located where the Maya once thrived will be excited about the increase in tourism revenue. Contrary to what those dodgy websites are telling you, it won't be a scary time at all (in Central America, at least). As our calendar transitions from 2011 to 2012, we can expect to see more doomsday theories surface, each convincingly portraying the weird and wonderful ways in which the world will be blow-torched in the Fall of 2012. So long as there is money to be made from people's fear, we'll keep seeing the bookshelves stacked with a disproportionate amount of doom and Google ads linking to websites with doomsayers' warped versions of reality. But all these theories have a common theme: Whether the purveyor of theorized doom is a killer solar flare, galactic alignment or a brilliantly-timed Planet X (or Nibiru), they are all complete bunk. There is no evidence of 2012 being anything special -- next year will have its fair share of war, death, destruction, calamities and financial meltdowns, but the Maya -- or any other ancient civilization for that matter -- didn't predict it.

Image: An indigenous Mayan participates in an ancient ceremonial game called "juego de pelota" (ball game) during a ceremony by Guatemalan Officials to welcome the upcoming 13th Baktun, an end to the ancient Mayan calendar on December 2012. Mayan Elders disregard some western views that this date is associated with the end of the world. But Guatemala hopes to economize on the forecast boom in tourism for the upcoming year. Credit: J. Google Earth images of Gobi desert spark new UFO frenzy.

Gobi Desert, China. Desert tracks ... Google Earth images of Gobi desert show strange markings. THESE amazing satellite pictures have started conspiracy theories around the world. They come from Google Earth, where fans of the unexplained are discovering weird phenomena. Such pictures have always caused controversy. UFO expert NICK POPE discusses the latest finds. INTERNET forums are buzzing with talk of bizarre, futuristic-looking structures that have been found in a remote part of China.

But what are they? Lost cities? Secret military bases? Might there be a connection with UFOs and aliens? The modern-day explorers who have found these weird objects are not brave adventurers in the style of Indiana Jones. These are ordinary people, sitting at home in front of their computers, using Google Earth to search for discoveries they believe might change the world. One of the images they have found in the Gobi desert is a structure that looks like a giant spider's web. Is it a man-made crop circle? Have Chinese scientists cracked the code and is this an attempt to establish communication with aliens?

PM Response:

There have been much speculation, and working with a number of associates we can confirm that there is a good possibility that the images depict disused military establishments that may have placed images on the ground for satellite imagery testing. Not the first time such things have been discovered.

Also, there are a number references that suggest a few early listening posts may have been built throughout the desert.

Beyond Best Evidence: The UFO Enigma is a feature-length documentary that will take the cases shown in Best Evidence, as well as a couple of new ones that highlight what appear to be some of the more "high strangeness" aspects of the phenomenon, and explore with the three key possible explanations with world's leading experts on the subject, as follows:

1. Extraterrestrial Hypothesis - This explanation maintains that UFO sightings represent proof of visitation to Earth by advanced extraterrestrials from another world, most likely within what proponents term of "local galactic neighbourhood."
2. Interdimensional Hypothesis - This explanation maintains that UFO sightings involve visitations from other "realities" or "dimensions" that co-exist alongside our own. It also holds that UFOs are a modern manifestation of a phenomenon that has occurred throughout recorded human history, which in prior ages were ascribed to mythological or supernatural forces and creatures.
3. Psychosocial hypothesis - This explanation maintains that UFO Sightings can be explained by psychological or social means, examples of which include wishful thinking, hallucinations, hoaxes, and misidentification of prosaic objects, such as satellites, aircraft, or natural phenomena.

New Paranormal EMF Meters available in the UK

The Mel Vibe (£129.99) has all the features of the original Mel Meter but is also highly sensitive to measure vibrations. The Mel REM ATDD (£189.99) features a hot and cold spot alarm, red flashlight, EMF radiating antenna and glow in the dark buttons. What makes the Mel REM ATDD Model so uniquely different from other EMF meters is that it can detect AC/DC EMF fluctuations and ambient temperature changes using the special Radiating EM Field (REM) and Ambient Temperature Deviation Detection (ATDD).

TomsGadgets is proud to announce the addition of two new models of the Mel Meter to their EMF product range. The Mel 8704R Vibe and the Mel 8704R REM ATDD are made in the USA and are designed exclusively for paranormal use. The original Mel Pro Navigator Meter 8704R (£89.99) is the only meter that can measure both EMF and temperature simultaneously. The Mel Meter 8704R was first developed by Gary Galka of DAS Distribution Inc as a way of communicating with his daughter Melissa, following her death. The Mel was even named after her; the year of her birth (87) and the year of her death (04) hence the name Mel 8704.

"TomsGadgets is the paranormal one stop shop for paranormal and ghost hunting equipment and we are the only stockists of the MEL meters in the UK." Tom Cook, Managing Director of TomsGadgets.com

Mel 8704R Pro Navigator, Mel 8740R Vibe and Mel 8704R REM ATDD are available from www.TomsGadgets.com.

TomsGadgets is the gadget store with a difference, supplying a full range of quality corporate products all under one roof.

The British Investigators Training Course in Anomalous Phenomena

The BITC has become one of the leading educational courses of its kind throughout the UK and overseas, covering subjects such as Forensic Parapsychology, Anomalistic Psychology & The Scientific Study of Anomalous Phenomena. The BITC is currently only available as a correspondent course. Students obtaining the BITC will receive the course if full along with a free CD-Rom containing thousands of photographs, newspaper clippings and documents. The BITC consists of 20 modules and question sheets. Students will be required to complete all question sheets and return them to MAPIT Head Office for marking. On receipt MAPIT will dispatch a one hundred question examination sheet. On passing the BITC, students will receive a BITC Certificate & Confidential Registration Document. The BITC has no time limits. Students have as long as they wish to complete and return to MAPIT Head Office. It is not compulsory for students to sit the BITC Examination paper, however it is necessary if students wish to become active researchers or investigators.

The BITC is constructed under the guidelines set by SEP—The Scientific Establishment of Parapsychology and is compiled by investigators, academics and scientists from around the world. Students can contact MAPIT if they are having any difficulties whilst sitting the BITC. Useful information can also be found on the MAPIT Web Site:

<http://www.mapit.kk5.org>

Students that pass the BITC can obtain assistance with investigation, research, analysis or be put in contact with an organisation in their area. Many organisations across the UK recognise the BITC qualification and are well aware of its standards. Our qualification may allow students to join an organisation and immediately become activists without the need to sit other courses. BITC Examination papers require 75% of questions to be correct. Anything less will result in failure. The BITC can be sat by students of any age and need no previous knowledge. Further courses are available such as the AITC Advanced Course. The AITC is only available to BITC registered students. MAPIT & SEP can also assist in regards further studies and UK available courses in Forensic Parapsychology, Anomalistic Psychology and many others. Organisations that have their investigators BITC Registered can become associated with SEP. Associated groups, organisations & establishments can obtain assistance from SEP & MAPIT in regards investigation, research, administration etc and must adhere to the SEP & MAPIT Protocols. SEP & MAPIT will also distribute investigations to associated groups, organisations and establishments if in the locality of the investigation. SEP & MAPIT also offer their full range of services such as analysis, training sessions, events etc.

The BITC costs just £50.00 in total consisting of Registration £10.00
& Coursework £40.00

Total U.S. Overseas cost $120.00 Total European cost 60.00 Euro.

If interested in sitting the BITC or AITC course, simply send your total course fee to MAPIT Head Office, making sure to include your full postal address and details of which course you would like to obtain.

WHO PUT THE NORM IN PARANORMAL?...

Barking Mad.

Last time I touched on the subject of perhaps the best-known and certainly the most frequently encountered, spooks in Britain – the 'Black Dog'. As we know, the typical example of the breed takes the form of a black mastiff, about the size of a calf with a shaggy coat and big, glowing eyes.

The Black Dog phenomenon has been reported throughout the British Isles and beyond but even in one county there might be variants. Writer A W Dutt described Norfolk's 'Old Shuck' as having either yellow eyes or just one fiery eye in the middle of its forehead, or it might be headless. This variation is extended throughout Britain. Black Dogs are usually black but not always. They often look just like dogs but just as often they are a mixture of canine and – something else. A few examples look nothing like dogs. Most are silent, a few are noisy.

What they have in common is their outlandish size, an unearthly quality unlike that of any living creature and their habit of dogging the footsteps of travellers along roads and footpaths. I shall explore the many 'mongrel' varieties in this article.

First of all, let's look at variants in colour. In the Morfa colliery in South Wales, a ghostly hound would appear as a warning of death or accident. This beast was unique in being blood red in colour rather than then usual black. Is this simply because it wouldn't otherwise have 'shown up' in the pitch-black tunnels? Black Dogs that are actually white have also been recorded. One haunts the graveyard of All Saints' Church in Edmonton, East London. It is said to be 'harmless if left alone' – what it does when bothered isn't recorded! Another was seen on Dartmoor, Devon, in the 1930s. The witness described her sighting to author J Wentworth Day, and he reprinted it in his 'Ghost Hunter's Game Book' of 1958:

'I wandered into the [unspecified] wood with our retriever Tinker and was picking up fir cones when I looked up to see a large white dog coming towards me through the trees. Tinker also saw it. He stared – then with tail down, bolted. I had never seen a dog like him on the moor. He had a cream, silky, long-haired coat, long ears and a sweeping tail. I said aloud, "Oh! You lovely creature!"'

In the way-back-when of my time editing Paranormal Magazine, I jokingly coined the term 'spookology' in one of my editorials. I've started using 'spook' as a handy word for any really weird and inexplicable ghostly phenomenon. At a time when the supernatural, an area of research in which we still understand very little, is becoming increasingly codified, the bizarre nature of the spooks recalled in this column may serve as a reminder that it's way too soon to start normalising the paranormal...

He immediately vanished.' Wentworth Day also collected a considerable amount of Black Dog lore from residents of his native eastern counties. A Cambridgeshire Police Constable wrote to tell him about the 'Shug Monkey' which haunted the Newmarket area. He described it as: 'A cross between a big, rough-coated dog and a monkey, with big shining eyes. Sometimes it would shuffle along on its hind legs and at other times it would whiz past on all fours.'

Another weird apparition of this type haunted a track near the village of Llysworney in the Vale of Glamorgan. Anthony, a servant at the local farm, claimed to have encountered it while 'coming from courting of a Sunday night'. He saw 'two large, bright, moonlike eyes' approaching him, which turned out to belong to a spook which had the body and limbs of 'a large bright-spotted dog' but the head and upper torso of a man. Anthony threw his hat at it and the monster vanished.

Across the channel in Belgium there was the 'Kludde', a Black Dog with wings and fiery breath that stomped about the countryside on its hind legs. In Northumberland in the 1920s another bird-dog was seen by two men near Blythe. This peculiar hound 'gradually spread itself out about the size of an ordinary bed quilt' and drifted away over the tree-tops.

Finally we must consider those Black Dogs that do not look like dogs at all. The unearthly animal that disturbed the peace of the community of Narberth in Pembrokeshire was not only the size of a calf but looked just like one, too. The villagers herded it into a barn, from which it vanished overnight. The strange beast that haunted the lanes of Monmouthshire was known as the 'Buckholt Donkey'. Although it had the appearance of a donkey it was blue in colour and was sometimes lacking its head. Even more startling was the donkey-like apparition that haunted what is now the A5 at the Hyde in London: not only was it multi-coloured but also 'dazzling' to look upon. Next time I shall close this short series of articles on the Black Dog phenomenon with a couple of comparatively recent first-hand encounters I recorded from the same town in North Wales...

FUTURE APPLICATIONS IN PARAPSYCHOLOGY

In my last couple of articles I have explained about the origins in parapsychology and also the experimental methods currently used in parapsychological research. So in this article I am going to explain future and possible future applications in parapsychology. In parapsychological research and experimental techniques we may find a key to unlocking subconscious and unconscious super potential which could change the way we scientists think. If the key to unlocking PSI phenomena can be unlocked, e.g. Telepathy, Clairvoyance, Precognition, ESP and Psychokinesis etc, it could change the way we think about life and death and physics. The potential practical applications of parapsychological research could be used in the following areas:

Scientific discovery, finding lost objects and Archaeological excavation, psychotherapy and counselling, historical investigation, environmental improvement, future forecasting aversion and prediction of natural and man made disasters, executive decision making, military intelligence, personnel management, future education and training, medicine and dentistry, investigative journalism, police work and criminal investigation, entertainment, agriculture and pest control, social control, creativity, human and animal training and interspecies communication, mental lifting techniques especially for disabled or paraplegic persons, contests and gambling, geological exploration, safety inspection, weather prediction and control and aversion, dowsing techniques.

Rob Young BSc is a Parapsychologist based in Mansfield, Nottinghamshire. He is also the founder of TOPS, The Office of Parapsychological Studies. For more information on investigations and research please contact Rob Young directly on: 01623650462 or at his email address: itstherob@hotmail.com or alternatively contact him through his organisation and website address: www.parapsy.co.uk

There are many areas where parapsychological research could benefit mankind in the future. For instance there has been much research in the PK ability of Direct Mental Interaction on Living Systems (DMILS) also known as Bio PK. This could help in the field of medicine as well as healing and alleged psychic surgery. With this in mind would it be possible in the future to use these paranormal abilities without the use of controlled drugs? Or even to be able for an individual to undergo surgery without the need for flesh to be cut or sewn and diseased parts to be removed?

Also with the ability of PK in mind would it be possible for a paraplegic or a disabled individual to be able to lift and move objects with just a thought? It may seem a far fetched idea, but nonetheless it presents quite an astonishing thought! Unfortunately we just wish it was that easy to unlock, first we have to look at how and why the process operates and indeed if it does actually exist. Although there is evidence that suggests some of these paranormal processes do seem to exist, the evidence seems to be only statistically significant and above chance, but nonetheless intriguing. What about life after death? Could you imagine being able to scientifically prove the one question that has plagued our minds since time immemorial, the question that our consciousness or soul does indeed survive bodily death! now that's food for thought!

Can PSI be used for the purpose of criminal investigation? There is a long history of criminal cases in the annals of parapsychological research in which an alleged psychically gifted person is said to have assisted in the apprehension of the perpetrator of the offence such as using dowsing tools, Psychometry (Whilst holding an object that had been in contact with the victim or the offender, the psychic could paranormally obtain information about the crime). There are also success cases where the predominant method of psychic detection involves waking clairvoyant visions where the clairvoyant gives hints and clues and information about the crime, the victim and the offender which leads to the offender being caught and missing persons (alive or dead) being found.

Although there are many benefits that parapsychological research could give to the world there are also concerns that there are those that unfortunately would abuse it. Some national governments are interested in the prospect of utilising parapsychological research findings for military purposes. In the USA for example, the government for over twenty years funded research on the potential application of remote viewing for intelligence gathering. The work was eventually de-classified and expert evaluations of the program were made public. The research was called Project Stargate. Russian attention to military applications has also been documented. It is said that the worlds superpowers have been investigating the use of ESP and the Out of Body Experience in espionage and of PK for sabotage, e.g. of radar equipment or missile guidance systems.

Some reports of government involvement in these applications may be instances of disinformation, the objective being to incite rival nations to waste some of their defence budget in monitoring parapsychological research. Many parapsychologists are disturbed by the idea of their field being subverted towards military ends. If parapsychologists provide evidence of direct mental interaction with living systems, or of psychic healing or psychokinesis, there is no logical reason why such abilities might not be directed towards harmful rather than beneficial ends.

Could you imagine a soldier or an individual being able to kill or harm a person using PK? Or Stopping the heart using bio PK? Or being able to control the thoughts of others to do harm to others or themselves? It is quite a frightening prospect!

On the other hand the inability to control the phenomena and the minuteness of effect typical of PSI experiments give little reason to believe that military applications or indeed many other mooted practical applications, could be successful in the near future. Only time and future experimentation will tell!

Close Encounter Therapy & Counseling

People can suffer from trauma as a result of their UFO sighting or other close contact and they usually have many fears they need to deal with.

Some people have fragments of memories that are frightening to them mainly because they do not remember the whole event. Not all of their memories are from the real events, some are screen memories. Human minds can distort memories of traumatic events and sometimes we replace a traumatic image with a more comfortable one.

UFOs and the New Age Symposium

[John] Mack ... offered a comment on the theory that images of large-eyed animals seen during abduction experiences might be “screen memories” of large-eyed aliens, pointing out that some of the animals most often seen (racoons, owls, etc.) are traditional “power animals” among indigenous peoples such as Native Americans. He said that the Shamans among indigenous peoples have known all about the beings we sometimes call the Greys, and have experiences themselves.
