

Theity

Theity: an interventionist God, who created the universe and who is intimately involved with its affairs.

I would say most Christians are theists, since a non-interventionist God would seem to me incompatible with a religion which upholds prayer and direct relationship with Christ.

From: http://forum.ship-of-fools.com/cgi-bin/ultimatebb.cgi?ubb=get_topic;f=70;t=014774

God's "interaction" may consist in "a resonating not availing," sort of like an "involved Deity," or a "relaxed Theity." The purpose of our efforts and choices may be to comfort God's resonance. Each of our perspectives may be a holographic interpretation of consciousness of holistically resonating God. Through our holographic eyes, holistic God may dream a resonance.

From: <http://redassmoderates.blogspot.com/2009/03/involved-deity-vs-relaxed-theity.html>

A Theity is a God who intervenes and controls everything. A Deity does not.

From: <http://www.sciforums.com/No-Begging-t-107331.html>

I speak with fundamentalist and conservative seminarians almost every day. The theity/deity distinction is understood by them, and used by them, in discussing random issues.

From:

http://community.beliefnet.com/go/thread/view/43851/13468149/Why_Bahauallah?post_id=312424483

Another God appeared, a mere Deity (meaning no intervention, so he's not a Theity), and thusly said, "Forget the Theity solution. I am the smart God that seeded evolution. It was I that set the whole universal notion and all of life's evolution into motion; that was my elegant and foreseeing way of creating the kind of life that would stay."

From: <http://www.thescienceforum.com/viewtopic.php?p=276462>

My next disproof will indeed show that there is no cause for the universe—this uncaused 'cause'—thus obviating God the Theity. It even address the argument directly through, with proof. Science just doesn't 'say' or guess or pronounce a philosophical argument—it uses evidence.

From: <http://www.toequest.com/forum/intelligent-design/2502-science-versus-god-160.html>

Another God appeared, in my imagination, a mere Deity, (meaning no intervention, so he's not a Theity), and thusly said, "Forget the Theity solution. I am the smart God that seeded evolution. It was I that set the whole universal notion and all of life's evolution into motion; that was my elegant and foreseeing way of creating the kind of life that would stay."

From: <http://www.toequest.com/forum/the-high-level-view/5560-deists-scientists-peaceful-coexistence.html>